

EXHIBIT E

Communications with June Bloch

This exhibit contains text messages, with accompanied analysis, between the Decedent and the Petitioner, Jaden Riley, over several years. These conversations highlight the Decedent's consistent presence in the Petitioner's life and shared emotional connection. They also provide evidence of the Decedent's cognitive decline, as seen in her increasingly erratic, verbally abusive, and uncharacteristic messages—strongly indicative of dementia. These texts further support the Petitioner's claim of a close familial relationship and the Decedent's deteriorating ability to manage her affairs independently.

Key Facts to Keep in Mind When Reading:

Age of Onset for FTD, ARD, and WKS

1. Frontotemporal Dementia (FTD)

- Typical Age of Onset: 40–65 years old
- Can Occur As Early As: Late 20s–30s (rare)
- Peak Onset: 50s–60s
- Progression: 6–10 years from diagnosis to death
- Key Factors Influencing Onset: Genetics (familial FTD cases), environmental/lifestyle factors

2. Alcohol-Related Dementia (ARD) / Alcohol-Related Brain Damage (ARBD)

- Typical Age of Onset: 40s–60s
- Can Occur As Early As: 30s (for chronic heavy drinkers)
- Peak Onset: 50s–60s
- Progression: Variable; may stabilize or even improve if alcohol consumption stops early enough
- Key Factors Influencing Onset: Duration and severity of alcohol consumption, nutritional deficiencies (especially thiamine/B1), liver damage

3. Wernicke-Korsakoff Syndrome (WKS)

- Typical Age of Onset: 45–65 years old
- Can Occur As Early As: 30s (in severe alcoholics or individuals with extreme malnutrition)
- Peak Onset: 50s–60s
- Progression: Rapid if untreated (Wernicke's Encephalopathy can develop into permanent Korsakoff's Syndrome within weeks to months)
- Key Factors Influencing Onset: Severe and prolonged thiamine (vitamin B1) deficiency, often due to alcoholism, malabsorption, or malnutrition

The Dementias of FTD, ARD, and WKS in June Bloch's Case

- June was 66–70 years old between 2017 and 2021, well within the common age range for symptomatic FTD, ARD, and WKS.
- Her history of chronic alcohol consumption, autoimmune disease, and likely nutritional deficiencies would greatly increase her risk of developing ARD and WKS, with FTD also remaining a strong possibility given her progressive behavioral, emotional, and executive function decline.
- Given that ARD and WKS can accelerate cognitive decline, her ability to execute a valid will or legal transactions in 2021 was highly questionable at best, and outright impossible at worst.

June's Age: 63 years old

"Thanks. We're in Sonoma 🍷 🍷 . Having a great time. Talk to you soon."

Text from Jaden (Aligned to the Right):

(No response appears in this text message screenshot.)

Analysis:

Behavioral Indicators (Cognitive Decline):

- Pattern of Alcohol Use: June explicitly mentions being in Sonoma, a region known for wine culture, and uses wine emojis (🍷 🍷) in celebration. This reinforces a pattern of alcohol being a focal point in her social life.
- While no overt signs of cognitive decline are present in this message, it does reflect June's long-standing social drinking habits, which contributed to alcohol-related neurological damage over time. Chronic alcohol consumption is a well-documented risk factor for alcohol-related dementia (ARD) and can exacerbate symptoms of frontotemporal dementia (FTD).

Maternal Relationship:

- There are no direct signs of maternal care in this exchange, but June's warm tone reflects her consistent effort to stay engaged in communication with Jaden. This message suggests June's enjoyment of life at this time, contrasting with her later emotional instability.

Exclusion by Lindsey:

- This exchange does not explicitly reference exclusion by Lindsey. However, Lindsey's presence in Sonoma with June reinforces the contrast between June's inclusive relationship with Jaden and Lindsey's eventual actions to isolate June and exclude Jaden from family matters.

Relevance to FTD and/or ARD:

- Chronic Alcohol Use as a Contributing Factor: June's reference to being in Sonoma (a wine region) and her celebratory use of wine emojis (🍷 🍷) highlight the centrality of alcohol in her social life. This provides early context for ARD, where prolonged alcohol use may have contributed to the behavioral and cognitive changes observed in later years.

Additional Context Beyond the Text Message:

- Social Drinking and Long-Term Health: Sonoma's reputation as a wine region and June's explicit celebration of drinking highlights the centrality of alcohol to her lifestyle during this period.
- June's celebratory tone around alcohol consumption suggests it was a normalized part of her social interactions.

Key Takeaway:Alcohol Use Pattern:

- This text provides early evidence of June's habitual alcohol use, which becomes relevant in understanding the role of alcohol in her cognitive decline.

Baseline for Emotional Stability:

- At this time, June's tone is warm and conversational, offering a baseline for comparison with her later erratic and hostile behavior.

Text from Jaden (Aligned to the Right):

"You two are all the blood family I have left, so don't go giving me reasons to worry."

(No response appears in this text message screenshot.)

Analysis:

Behavioral Indicators (Cognitive Decline):

- No direct evidence of cognitive decline or behavioral issues is evident in this text as June does not respond.

Maternal Relationship:

- Jaden's Reliance on June: Jaden's message underscores her emotional reliance on June as a maternal figure, emphasizing the depth of their relationship and Jaden's desire for reassurance from June.

Exclusion by Lindsey:

- Importance of Family Context: This message highlights the small size of the family, which becomes pivotal in Lindsey's eventual exclusion of Jaden. By isolating June and eroding the trust between June and Jaden, Lindsey capitalized on the absence of a larger family network to execute her plans.

Relevance to FTD and/or ARD:

- This exchange does not directly provide evidence of FTD or ARD, but it sets the stage for understanding the familial dynamics and emotional connection between Jaden and June before cognitive decline and manipulation.

Additional Context Beyond the Text Message:

- Familial Isolation: Jaden's message reinforces how small and interconnected the family was, making it easier for Lindsey to exploit these dynamics in the years to come.

Key Takeaway:

- Familial Bond: This exchange underscores the emotional reliance Jaden placed on June as a maternal figure, reinforcing the significance of their bond before June's cognitive decline and Lindsey's exclusionary actions.

Text from June (Aligned to the Left):

"A (short for Adrienne) we were going to use Uber so we can have 🍷🍸🍷 would you be our driver since you don't drink? It would save me a lot of $$."

Text from Jaden (Aligned to the Right):

"Happy to! My car is pretty trashed. I'll try to get it cleaned by then."

Analysis:

Behavioral Indicators (Cognitive Decline):

- June's message shows no signs of cognitive decline. However, her reliance on Jaden for transportation due to drinking highlights a long-standing pattern of alcohol use.

Maternal Relationship:

- Trust in Jaden: By asking Jaden to be the designated driver, June demonstrates trust and reliance on her, showcasing a practical example of their familial bond.

Exclusion by Lindsey:

- Emerging Contrast: While no exclusionary behavior is evident in this text, it contrasts with Lindsey's later actions to isolate Jaden. June's inclusion of Jaden in these plans highlights the familial connection that Lindsey later worked to undermine.

Relevance to FTD and/or ARD:

- Alcohol Consumption as an Early Dementia Risk Factor: June's request for a designated driver reinforces her regular alcohol consumption. Over time, this pattern likely contributed to ARD and exacerbated FTD-related symptoms.

Additional Context Beyond the Text Message:

- Role of Alcohol: June's dependence on alcohol during social gatherings highlights a pattern of behavior that would later have significant health and cognitive consequences.
- The explicit mention of Jaden not drinking reinforces Jaden's role as a responsible support figure in contrast to June's drinking habits.

Key Takeaway:

- Baseline for Alcohol Patterns: This text provides further evidence of June's reliance on alcohol in social settings, which is relevant to understanding her later cognitive decline.

June's Age: 63 years old

Text from June (Aligned to the Left):

"Jon is nervous to have Thanksgiving dinner with you. You are Lindsey's only family. I told him you already had breakfast together. So be your wonderful self. He's still nervous with me too. Our family is limited, so I guess that's different. See you tomorrow."

Text from Jaden (Aligned to the Right):

(No response appears in this text message screenshot.)

Analysis:

Behavioral Indicators (Cognitive Decline):

- June's message does not display any obvious signs of cognitive decline, emotional instability, or impaired judgment. Her tone is warm, conversational, and grounded, showing no evidence of memory issues, emotional dysregulation, or other symptoms associated with FTD or ARD.

Maternal Relationship:

Encouragement and Validation:

- June's request for you to "be your wonderful self" underscores her appreciation for your personality and the positive influence you brought to family dynamics. This phrasing suggests that she valued you for who you were, without any indication of the negative portrayal seen in her later texts.
- This text reflects June's supportive role, highlighting her efforts to encourage confidence and reassure you of your importance in the family.

Recognition of Your Importance in the Family:

- June's explicit acknowledgment of your role as "Lindsey's only family" reinforces your critical place in the family structure. Her words show that she saw you as integral to Lindsey's life and well-being, further affirming her desire to include you and maintain a strong family connection.

Exclusion by Lindsey:

You as the Only Threat to Lindsey's Plans:

- June's statement, "You are Lindsey's only family," highlights the unique dynamic of your small family unit. The small size of your family made it significantly easier for Lindsey to isolate June and remove you as a perceived obstacle to her actions, including excluding you from the will.

- Lindsey did not have to contend with a large family or multiple external observers questioning her behavior. By isolating June and manipulating her perception of you, Lindsey created a false narrative that you were problematic, knowing there were few others to contradict this portrayal.

Limited Family Creates Opportunity for Exploitation:

- June's reflection on the family being "limited" emphasizes how few people were present to advocate for you or question Lindsey's actions. COVID-19 restrictions and the natural isolation that comes with a small family unit would have made it easier for Lindsey and her husband, Jonathan, to exert control over June's decisions.
- Jonathan's expertise as a digital media professional likely provided Lindsey with additional tools to manipulate public perception and maintain control over communications or records, further disadvantaging you in protecting your rightful place in the family dynamic.

June's Desire for Inclusion Contrasts with Lindsey's Actions:

- June's encouragement to "be your wonderful self" and her advocacy for your presence contrasts sharply with Lindsey's later deliberate exclusion of you from family events and decisions. This contrast highlights how Lindsey's actions undermined June's wishes and exploited her cognitive vulnerabilities as they progressed.

Relevance to FTD and/or ARD:

- This message does not directly display evidence of FTD or ARD symptoms. However, its relevance lies in providing a baseline of June's cognitive and emotional stability at this time. Her warm, inclusive tone contrasts sharply with later messages marked by hostility and paranoia, illustrating the progression of cognitive decline. As June's cognitive abilities diminished, it is plausible that Lindsey exploited this vulnerability to manipulate June's perception of Jaden, planting vile lies and fabrications that made June doubt the kind, generous, and loving person she knew Jaden to be. These manipulations likely contributed to the drastic shift in June's behavior and attitudes toward Jaden, further demonstrating the external influences that exacerbated her cognitive decline and emotional instability.

Additional Context Beyond the Text Message:

Family Size and Vulnerability to Manipulation:

- The small size of your family made it easier for Lindsey to isolate June and control her narrative about Jaden. With fewer family members to observe or intervene, Lindsey had an opportunity to manipulate June's perception of Jaden without significant resistance.

June's Diminished Cognitive Capacity as a Tool for Manipulation:

- As June's cognitive decline progressed, her diminished capacity made her more susceptible to external influence. Lindsey likely used this vulnerability to plant lies and distortions, eroding the loving and supportive relationship June historically shared with Jaden.

Contrast with Later Messages:

- This message provides a stark contrast to later messages where June exhibited hostility and paranoia, behaviors that could have been exacerbated or instigated by Lindsey's influence alongside the progression of June's dementia.

Jonathan's Role:

- Lindsey's husband, Jonathan, as a digital media professional, could have played a role in helping Lindsey create or reinforce this narrative, ensuring that any doubts or accusations were carefully crafted to alienate Jaden further from anyone Lindsey perceived as a threat to her agenda.

Key Takeaway:Encouragement and Validation:

- June's statement, "be your wonderful self," underscores her appreciation for Jaden's kind and loving nature, reinforcing the strong familial bond she had with Jaden before her cognitive decline.

Family Vulnerabilities and Manipulation:

- The limited size of the family provided Lindsey with an opportunity to isolate June and plant doubts about Jaden, exploiting June's cognitive vulnerabilities to achieve her own goals.

Baseline for Contrast:

- This text illustrates June's emotional and cognitive stability at the time, serving as a baseline for comparing later messages marked by paranoia and hostility. These changes likely stemmed from a combination of dementia progression and Lindsey's manipulation.

June's Age: 63 years old

Text from June (Aligned to the Left):

"Our family is limited."

Text from Jaden (Aligned to the Right):

(No response appears in this text message screenshot.)

Analysis:

Behavioral Indicators (Cognitive Decline):

- This message does not exhibit any signs of cognitive decline or emotional dysregulation.

Maternal Relationship:

Acknowledgment of Family Importance:

- June's reflection on the limited size of the family underscores her understanding of the close bond between family members, reinforcing her appreciation for Jaden's role in their lives.

Exclusion by Lindsey:

Ease of Isolation:

- The acknowledgment of a small family highlights how easy it was for Lindsey to isolate June and manipulate her perception of Jaden. With no larger network of family members to intervene, Lindsey had fewer obstacles to achieve her goals.
- While exclusion by Lindsey is not explicitly mentioned, this message underscores the limited family dynamic, which later contrasts with efforts to exclude Jaden.

Relevance to FTD and/or ARD:

- This message does not directly support evidence of FTD or ARD but adds context to family dynamics.

Additional Context Beyond the Text Message:

Familial Vulnerabilities:

- The small family size made June and Jaden particularly vulnerable to Lindsey's manipulation.

- The reflection on family size highlights June's effort to strengthen familial ties, an important aspect of her relationship with Jaden.

Key Takeaway:

Exploitation of Family Dynamics:

- The small size of the family gave Lindsey a significant advantage in isolating June and marginalizing Jaden, which is critical to understanding the events that followed.
- This message demonstrates June's acknowledgment of the family's small size and her implicit recognition of Jaden's importance in maintaining family connections.

Text from June (Aligned to the Left):

"Am I being intrusive?"

Text from Jaden (Aligned to the Right):

"Not intrusive at all."

"Where in the world would you get that?"

"Well wipe that nasty thought."

Analysis

Behavioral Indicators (Cognitive Decline):

- Paranoia and Insecurity:
 - June's sudden, unsolicited question, "Am I being intrusive?" reflects a degree of paranoia or insecurity that may indicate cognitive or emotional changes associated with FTD. This abrupt doubt, especially in a situation without any apparent context to suggest intrusion, is characteristic of cognitive decline where emotional regulation and self-perception are impaired.
- Unprompted Emotional Dysregulation:
 - The need to ask such a question in a familial relationship where reassurance is implicit suggests signs of emotional dysregulation. Individuals with FTD may experience impaired insight, leading to self-doubt and abrupt expressions of insecurity.

Maternal Relationship:

- Supportive Dynamic:
 - Jaden's swift, reassuring response, "Not intrusive at all," shows her supportive and affirming role in the relationship. This exchange underscores Jaden's effort to maintain a positive connection and emotionally support June through her unwarranted insecurities.

Exclusion by Lindsey:

- This specific text does not explicitly reference Lindsey's exclusionary behaviors. However, June's perceived sense of intrusion may reflect a broader dynamic where her confidence in familial relationships was eroded over time.

Relevance to FTD and/or ARD:

- Paranoia as a Symptom of FTD:
 - The insecurity expressed in this text aligns with FTD symptoms, particularly the emotional instability and paranoia often observed in patients as cognitive impairments emerge.
- Absence of External Context:
 - That this statement appears without any apparent external trigger highlights the internal nature of June's paranoia, a hallmark of neurodegenerative conditions like FTD and ARD.

Additional Context Beyond the Text Message:

- Emotional Vulnerability as Cognitive Decline Onset:
 - This moment may represent a marker of June's growing emotional fragility, which worsened over subsequent years as her cognitive condition deteriorated.
- Jaden's Emotional Reassurance as a Protective Role:
 - Jaden's responses suggest she played a stabilizing role in June's life, contrasting with Lindsey's eventual exploitation of June's vulnerabilities.

Key Takeaway:

- Paranoia and Emotional Dysregulation:
 - June's insecurity is indicative of emotional and cognitive changes, reflective of conditions like FTD and ARD.
- Supportive Maternal Relationship:
 - Jaden's response reinforces the strength of their relationship and her commitment to reassuring and supporting June.

June's Age: 64 years old

"Are you breaking up?"

"Hello"

Text from Jaden (Aligned to the Right):

"Never break up with you guys"

Analysis

Behavioral Indicators (Cognitive Decline):

- Paranoia and Unwarranted Doubts:
 - June's unexpected question, "Are you breaking up" followed by "Hello" demonstrates heightened emotional insecurity, impatience, and a lack of rational grounding. This reflects cognitive changes commonly seen in FTD, where paranoia and irrational concerns begin to dominate interpersonal dynamics.
- Emotional Dysregulation:
 - The abruptness of this question without any apparent context indicates poor emotional regulation, characteristic of individuals experiencing signs of dementia.

Maternal Relationship:

- Reassurance from Jaden:
 - Jaden's response, "Never break up with you guys" is lighthearted yet reassuring, showcasing her efforts to provide emotional stability for June. This interaction reflects the maternal closeness and mutual care present in their relationship.

Exclusion by Lindsey:

- There are no direct references to Lindsey's actions in this text, though June's insecurities could have been exacerbated by external influences, including Lindsey's eventual manipulations.

Relevance to FTD and/or ARD:

- Paranoia and Cognitive Changes:
 - This unwarranted fear of abandonment aligns with symptoms of FTD, where paranoia, insecurity, and emotional instability emerge due to frontal lobe deterioration.

Additional Context Beyond the Text Message:

- Fragility in Familial Bonds:

- This text highlights June's increasing emotional fragility, potentially influenced by both internal cognitive changes and external stressors.

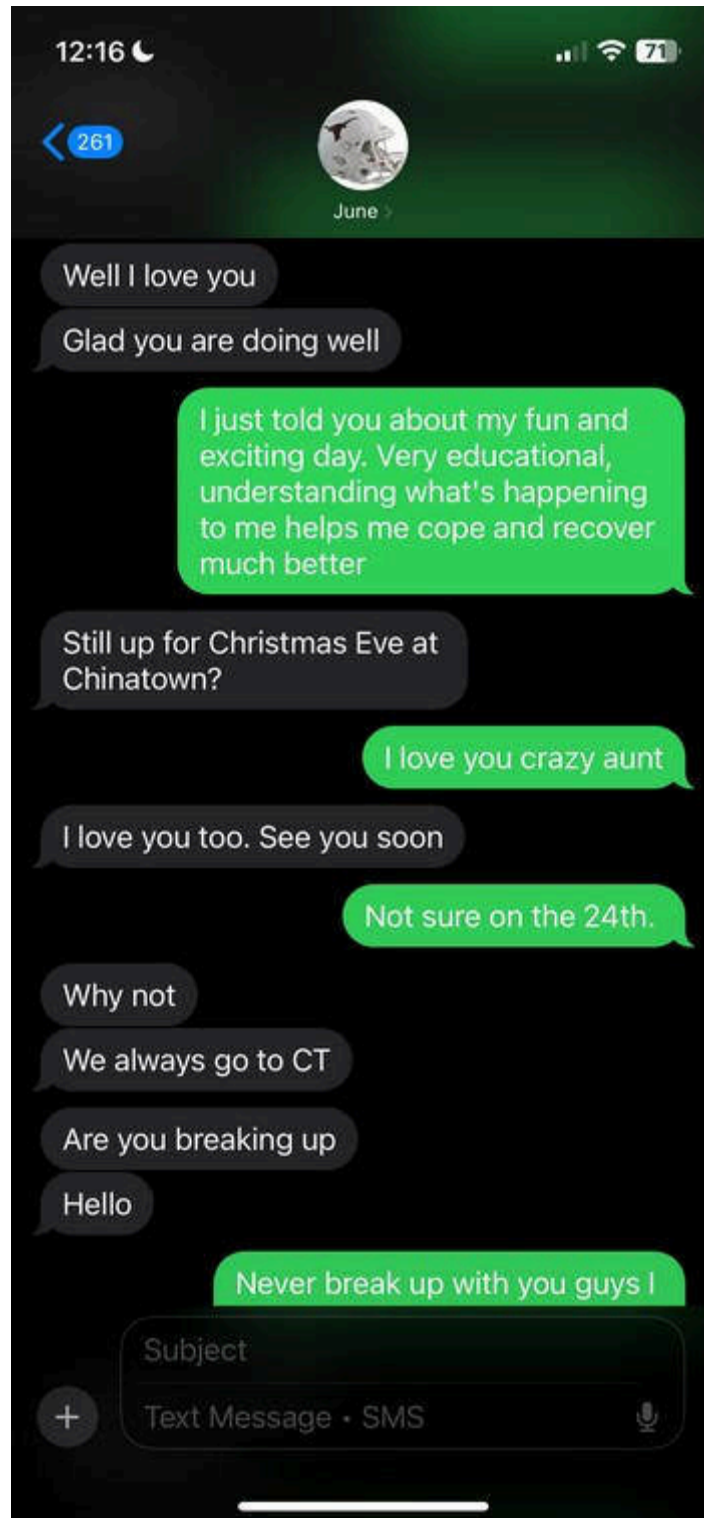

Key Takeaway:

- Emerging Paranoia:

- June's irrational fear of abandonment underscores the emotional and cognitive changes associated with FTD.

- Strength of Relationship:

- Jaden's response reflects her ongoing commitment to maintaining a positive and supportive relationship with June.

June's Age: 64 years old

"Come clean."

"So why not us?"

Text from Jaden (Aligned to the Right):

(No response appears in this text message screenshot.)

Analysis

Behavioral Indicators (Cognitive Decline):

- Impatience and Emotional Dysregulation:
 - June's abrupt demand, "Come clean," combined with the vague accusation, "Why not us?" reflects a heightened sense of impatience and emotional dysregulation. These behaviors are consistent with FTD, where impulsivity and poor emotional control are common symptoms.
- Paranoia and Lack of Context:
 - The accusatory tone and lack of specific context for the message suggest paranoia or a distorted sense of interpersonal dynamics, often seen in individuals with cognitive decline.

Maternal Relationship:

- Breakdown of Trust:
 - This message marks a departure from June's earlier supportive and nurturing tone, suggesting that her cognitive decline may have begun to erode her ability to maintain consistent trust and empathy in familial relationships.

Exclusion by Lindsey:

- While this text does not directly reference Lindsey, the emerging paranoia and hostility in June's messages could have been exacerbated by external influences, including potential manipulations by Lindsey.

Relevance to FTD and/or ARD:

- Impaired Emotional Regulation:
 - The accusatory tone and lack of context align with FTD symptoms, where emotional regulation and interpersonal dynamics become increasingly impaired.

Additional Context Beyond the Text Message:

- Shift in Relationship Dynamics:
 - This text illustrates a shift in June's behavior, moving away from warmth and support to suspicion and hostility, reflective of her cognitive decline.

Key Takeaway:

- Signs of FTD:
 - The impatience and paranoia displayed in this message are indicative of cognitive changes associated with FTD.
- Emerging Trust Issues:
 - This text highlights the beginning of a breakdown in familial trust, setting the stage for the relational challenges that would worsen as June's condition progressed.

June's Age: 64 years old

"Are you ick noing me 🤔"

Text from Jaden (Aligned to the Right):

(No response appears in this text message screenshot.)

Analysis

Behavioral Indicators (Cognitive Decline):

- Paranoia and Need for Reassurance:
 - June's question, "Are you ick noing me 🤔" reflects heightened paranoia and an increased need for validation, which are common symptoms of FTD and ARD.
- Emotional Dysregulation:
 - The accusatory tone and unwarranted suspicion suggest difficulty regulating emotions and an impaired ability to interpret interpersonal dynamics.

Maternal Relationship:

- Eroding Emotional Stability:
 - This text illustrates the beginning of June's emotional instability, which may have strained her maternal relationship with Jaden as her cognitive decline progressed.

Exclusion by Lindsey:

- While not explicitly referenced, the paranoia displayed here could have been influenced by Lindsey's eventual manipulations, further isolating Jaden from June.

Relevance to FTD and/or ARD:

- Emerging Symptoms:
 - The paranoia and emotional instability align with known symptoms of FTD and ARD, highlighting the cognitive changes impacting June's behavior.

Additional Context Beyond the Text Message:

- Shift Toward Paranoia:
 - This text represents a growing pattern of paranoia and emotional instability that would become more pronounced in later years.

Key Takeaway:

- Paranoia as a Symptom of Cognitive Decline:
 - June's question underscores the stages of emotional and cognitive changes indicative of FTD or ARD.
- Relational Strain:
 - This message marks the beginning of relational strain as June's emotional instability began to impact her interactions with Jaden.

January 19, 2016

Date: January 19, 2016

June's Age: 64 years old

(Paraphrased text regarding her friend's thyroid issues.)

Text from Jaden (Aligned to the Right):

(Responses to June's discussion on thyroid conditions.)

Analysis

Behavioral Indicators (Cognitive Decline):

- June's preoccupation with discussing her friend's thyroid issues reflects a possible shift in focus toward medical conditions, which is common in cognitive decline.
- The conversation is coherent but could suggest an emerging fixation on health-related matters, which may become more pronounced later in her messages.

Maternal Relationship:

- June engages Jaden in conversation about medical conditions, which aligns with her historical behavior of being supportive and involved in health discussions.
- This type of exchange showcases June's ongoing communication and a willingness to share thoughts with Jaden, demonstrating the close and familiar relationship they maintained.

Exclusion by Lindsey:

- No direct references to exclusion in this message. However, the consistency of June's engagement with Jaden at this point reinforces the contrast to her later isolation.

Relevance to FTD and/or ARD:

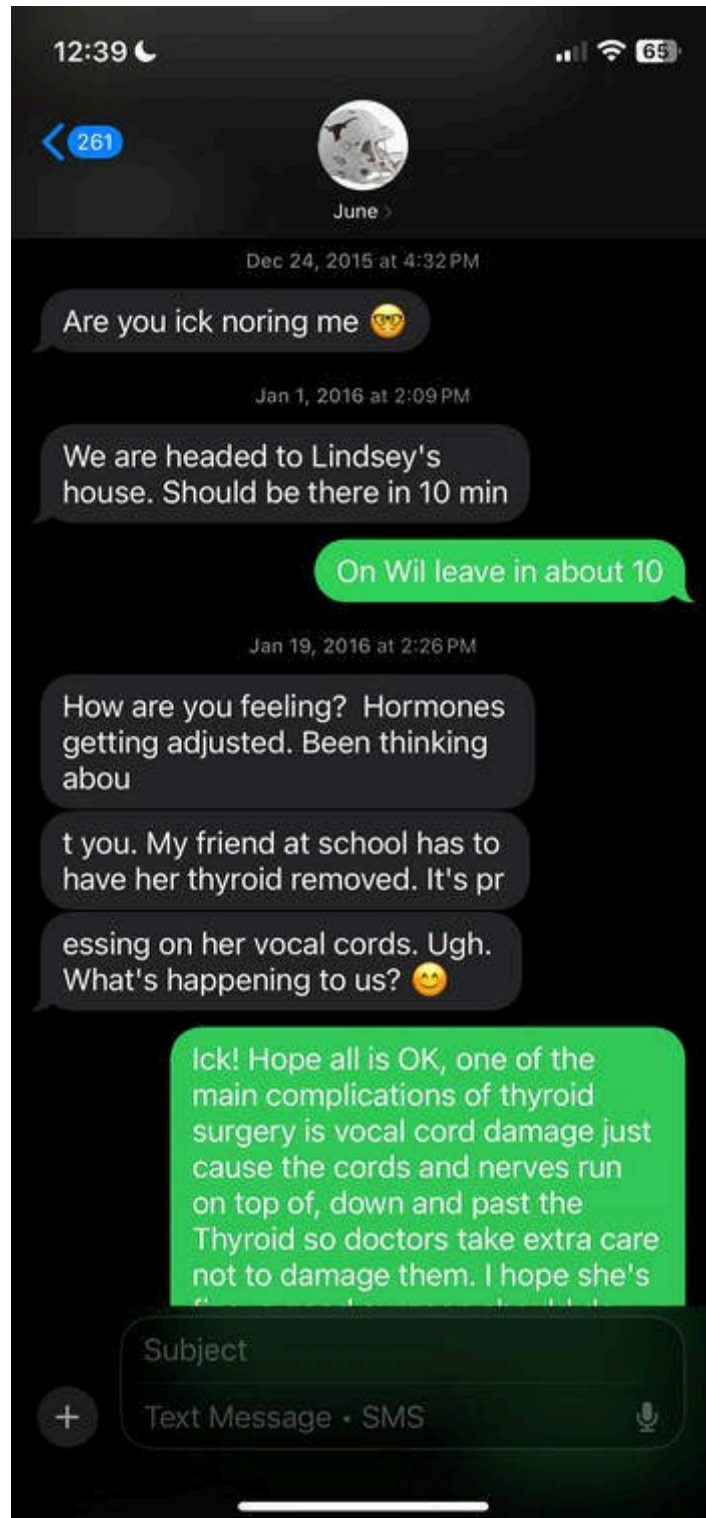

- While there are no overt symptoms of FTD or ARD in this exchange, the increasing focus on health-related anxieties could be an sign of cognitive shifts.

Additional Context Beyond the Text Message:

- This exchange highlights an example of a moment in time when June was still communicative, engaged, and displaying normal reasoning. It serves as a useful contrast to later texts, where paranoia and emotional volatility become more apparent.

Key Takeaway:

- June's ongoing engagement with Jaden about medical topics reflects a continued relationship of care and communication.
- This provides a baseline for later changes in behavior, where paranoia and emotional dysregulation start to appear.

January 19, 2016

Date: January 19, 2016

June's Age: 64 years old

Text from June (Aligned to the Left):

(Continuation of thyroid-related discussion.)

Text from Jaden (Aligned to the Right):

(Responses maintaining the conversation.)

Analysis

Behavioral Indicators (Cognitive Decline):

- June's persistent focus on medical issues could indicate perseveration (a symptom of cognitive decline where individuals fixate on particular topics).
- There is no significant evidence of memory loss or paranoia at this stage, but patterns of hyper-focus on certain concerns may indicate the beginning of cognitive rigidity.

Maternal Relationship:

- June's willingness to engage in conversation about medical conditions is another sign of her continued involvement, trust in, and care for Jaden's well-being.
- The conversational tone remains neutral and indicative of a healthy, longstanding familial connection.

Exclusion by Lindsey:

- Again, while no explicit exclusion is present, this message reinforces the consistency of June's prior behavior, making her later isolation from Jaden stand out even more.

Relevance to FTD and/or ARD:

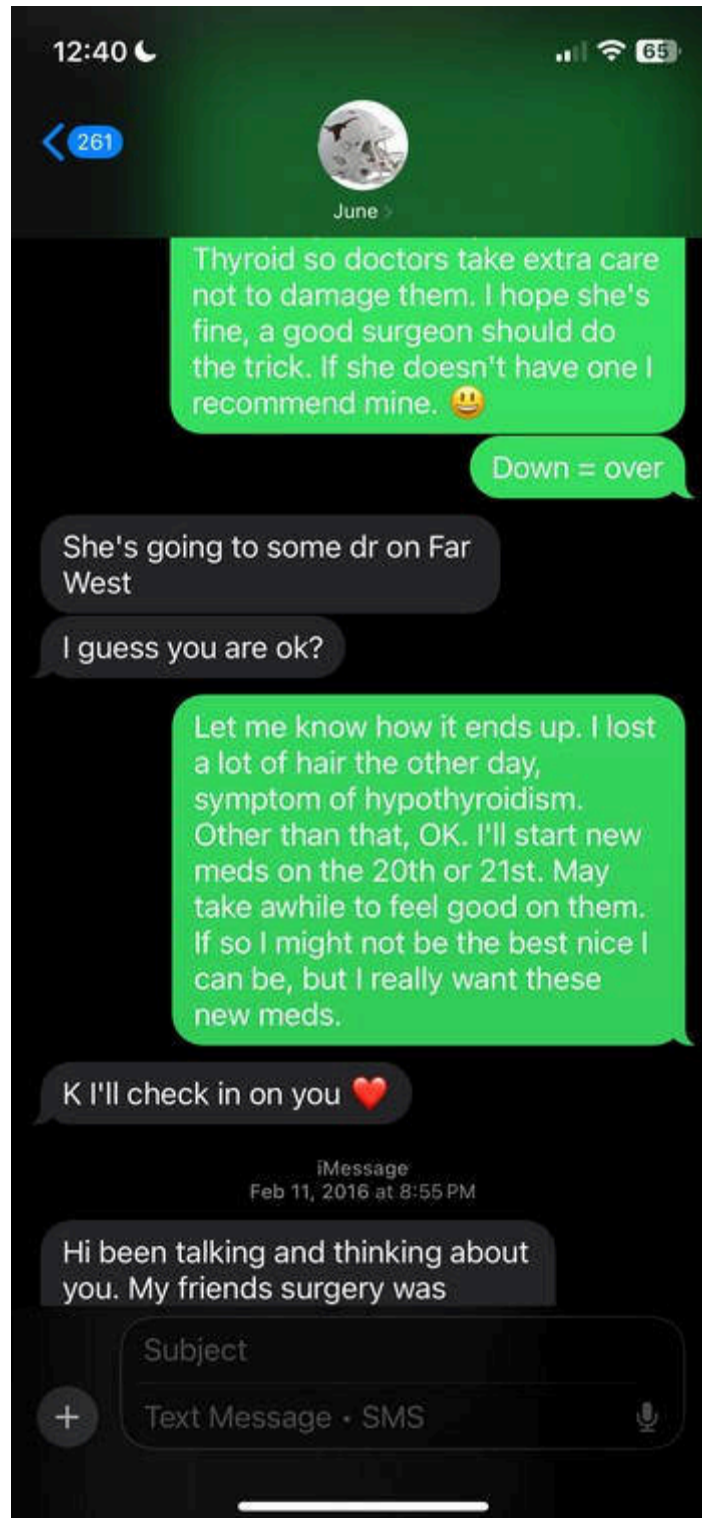

- Though not definitive, this message might serve as an example of June's cognitive fixation, a pattern that could develop into more rigid or obsessive thought patterns later.

Additional Context Beyond the Text Message:

- This exchange can be contrasted with later ones where paranoia and emotional dysregulation become more prominent.
- The consistency of these interactions makes June's later hostility toward Jaden more suspect, possibly as a result of manipulation by Lindsey.

Key Takeaway:

- This message captures a moment when June was still engaging normally with Jaden.
- The gradual onset of cognitive decline is difficult to pinpoint in a single exchange, but examining this in the broader context of June's changes over time is essential.

February 11, 2016

Date: February 11, 2016

June's Age: 64 years old

Text from June (Aligned to the Left):

(Discussion about complications with a friend's thyroid surgery.)

Text from Jaden (Aligned to the Right):

(Supportive responses acknowledging June's concerns.)

Analysis

Behavioral Indicators (Cognitive Decline):

- Similar to the prior messages, June's repeated engagement in conversations about medical issues could indicate a developing cognitive pattern.
- This may signal the stages of cognitive decline, where fixation on specific topics (such as medical concerns) becomes more pronounced.

Maternal Relationship:

- June continues to maintain consistent communication with Jaden, reinforcing her role as a maternal figure.
- Her engagement in discussion reflects a continued relationship of trust and shared concern.

Exclusion by Lindsey:

- Again, the consistency of June's relationship with Jaden at this time makes Lindsey's later exclusion efforts more glaring.
- The contrast between June's ongoing engagement in 2016 and her later isolation from Jaden suggests external influences, likely from Lindsey.

Relevance to FTD and/or ARD:

- There are no obvious markers of FTD or ARD in this message, though June's medical fixation remains noteworthy.
- This exchange helps establish a behavioral baseline to measure against later changes in June's communication patterns.

Additional Context Beyond the Text Message:

- As June's cognitive decline progresses, her ability to engage in meaningful conversation with Jaden deteriorates.
- The contrast between this normal exchange and later emotionally dysregulated messages provides evidence of decline and possible external influence.

Key Takeaway:

- June remains engaged and supportive, continuing to fulfill a maternal role in Jaden's life.
- Though no explicit dementia symptoms are present, the pattern of health-related focus could be an sign of cognitive changes.
- This exchange reinforces the importance of monitoring June's communication over time to track the development of cognitive decline and external manipulation.

March 22, 2016

Date: March 22, 2016

June's Age: 64 years old

"Going back to sleep. Call me now or tomorrow"

"Ha or not if you so choose. (hope not) 😊😡"

Text from Jaden (Aligned to the Right):

(No response appears in this text message screenshot.)

Analysis

Behavioral Indicators (Cognitive Decline):

- Impatience and Emotional Dysregulation:
 - June's repeated and exaggerated greeting ("Hello h e l l o h e l l o") conveys an urgent demand for attention, which reflects impatience and emotional dysregulation. Individuals experiencing frontotemporal dementia (FTD) often exhibit reduced impulse control and increased frustration when their needs are not immediately met.
 - The shift from urgency ("Call me now or tomorrow") to dismissiveness and self-reassurance ("Ha or not if you so choose. (hope not) 😊😡") highlights rapid emotional shifts, a common trait in FTD patients struggling with emotional regulation.
- Impulsivity and Repetition:
 - The spelling out of "hello" suggests compulsive repetition, which could be indicative of FTD-related speech pattern disruptions.
 - Impulsivity and demanding instant responses are common in frontal lobe deterioration, as this part of the brain controls patience, emotional restraint, and social appropriateness.
- Overcompensation with Humor and Affection:
 - June's shift to humor and emojis (😊😡) after demanding attention suggests an attempt to diffuse her own emotional intensity or prevent rejection.
 - This behavior aligns with paranoia and social withdrawal tendencies often seen in FTD and alcohol-related dementia (ARD), where individuals fear abandonment but also struggle with interpersonal boundaries.

Maternal Relationship:

- Increasing Need for Reassurance:
 - While June's previous interactions reflected trust and patience, this message suggests a shift where she now seeks immediate validation and attention, indicating a subtle breakdown in emotional regulation.
- Playful Yet Emotionally Erratic Behavior:
 - The emojis and joking tone mask the underlying demand for connection, which contrasts with earlier, calmer maternal interactions where she demonstrated more patience and stability.
 - This change in emotional approach suggests cognitive strain affecting her ability to maintain consistent interpersonal behavior.
- Desire for Connection:
 - June's message, despite its erratic tone, reflects a desire to maintain closeness with Jaden. Her playful use of humor and emojis demonstrates an effort to engage Jaden and encourage communication, highlighting her continued emotional reliance on their bond.
- Vulnerability in Communication:
 - The mixed signals in June's tone—demanding ("Hello h e l l o"), dismissive ("Call me now or tomorrow"), and hopeful ("hope not")—suggest a growing vulnerability in how she navigates the maternal relationship. This complexity reflects the subtle strain that cognitive decline can impose on even long-standing familial dynamics.

Exclusion by Lindsey:

- Lindsey's Opportunity to Exploit Emotional Instability:
 - June's growing impatience, impulsivity, and need for reassurance would have made her more vulnerable to external influence. Lindsey could have used these moments to paint Jaden as inattentive, feeding a narrative that Jaden was neglecting or abandoning June.
- Emotional Instability as a Tool for Isolation:
 - As June's behavior became more erratic, Lindsey could have positioned herself as the "dependable" caretaker, using June's frustration and impatience to increase reliance on Lindsey and further distance Jaden.
- Foreshadowing of Isolation:
 - June's increasing neediness and inconsistency in tone could have been used by Lindsey to portray Jaden as inattentive or unresponsive. As June's emotional dysregulation progressed, Lindsey likely exploited these moments to create a narrative of estrangement, isolating June further from Jaden.

Relevance to FTD and/or ARD:

- Symptoms of Emotional Dysregulation and Impulsivity:
 - The repetition of “h e l l o” and the erratic shift between affection, humor, and dismissiveness are consistent with FTD symptoms, which affect the frontal lobe’s ability to regulate emotions and impulses.
- Heightened Sensitivity and Paranoia:
 - June’s subtle anxiety about whether Jaden would call (“hope not”) may indicate emerging paranoia or heightened emotional sensitivity, often seen in early FTD or ARD cases.
- Impatience, Emotional Dysregulation, and Paranoia as Indicators:
 - June’s inability to regulate frustration and her emotional oscillation in this exchange align with FTD and ARD symptoms.
 - The demand for an immediate response, followed by rapid self-reassurance, indicates frontal lobe impairments affecting impulse control and emotional regulation.

Additional Context Beyond the Text Message:

- Contrast with Past Communication Patterns:
 - Earlier messages from June did not exhibit this level of urgency or emotional instability.
 - This shift reinforces the argument that cognitive decline had manifested, affecting her ability to communicate in a rational and consistent manner.
- How This Ties Into Future Isolation:
 - As June’s emotional instability worsened, Lindsey likely weaponized these changes to alienate Jaden, portraying her as uncaring or absent, while simultaneously strengthening her own role as June’s primary emotional support.

Key Takeaway:

- Early Cognitive and Emotional Instability:
 - The erratic tone, repetition, and overcompensation in this message highlight early symptoms of FTD, including emotional dysregulation, impulsivity, and sensitivity to perceived rejection.
- Maintaining the Maternal Bond:
 - Despite the instability in her communication, June’s message reflects a desire to maintain a strong emotional connection with Jaden, underscoring the importance of their relationship.

- Manipulation Vulnerability:

- June's increased impatience and need for validation created the perfect conditions for Lindsey to manipulate her perceptions, isolating Jaden over time.
- June's growing vulnerabilities, as seen in this message, would have made her increasingly susceptible to Lindsey's influence, setting the stage for the isolation and exclusion that followed.

- Baseline for Further Decline:

- This text marks a shift toward emotional dysregulation and impatience, establishing a baseline to compare against later texts where paranoia and hostility escalate further.

June's Age: 64 years old

(No text from June in this screenshot.)

Text from Jaden (Aligned to the Right):

"Your check for $1,630 for the dentist has been deposited into my bank account. Thank you so much."

Analysis

Behavioral Indicators (Cognitive Decline):

- There are no overt signs of cognitive decline from June in this interaction as she does not respond in this text.

Maternal Relationship:

- Supportive and Caring Role:
 - June's financial assistance of $1,630 for Jaden's dental work underscores her commitment to Jaden's well-being and her continued role as a supportive maternal figure. This financial support demonstrates both trust and care, countering any narrative that June did not value Jaden.

Exclusion by Lindsey:

- Evidence of Close Relationship Contradicting Lindsey's Narrative:
 - This instance of financial support contradicts any narrative that Lindsey may have perpetuated about June being estranged from Jaden. The act of generosity highlights the bond between June and Jaden, which later manipulations sought to erode.

Relevance to FTD and/or ARD:

- While this text does not directly exhibit signs of FTD or ARD, it establishes a baseline of June's normal cognitive and emotional functioning, which contrasts with the instability seen in later exchanges.

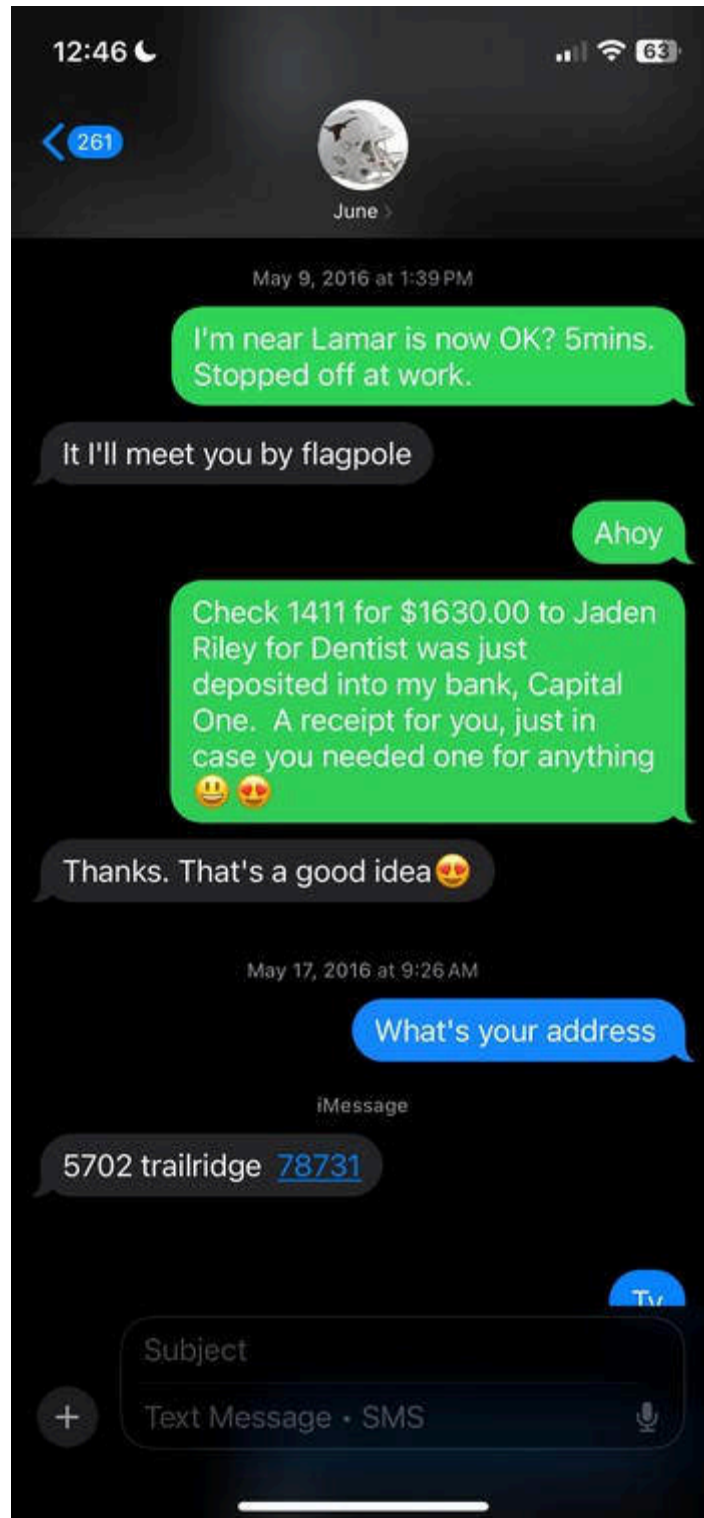

Additional Context Beyond the Text Message:

- Baseline for Contrast:

- June's financial independence and ability to provide support at this time are significant markers of her capacity before her cognitive decline became more evident.

Key Takeaway:

- Evidence of Maternal Support:
 - This text reinforces the strength of June's relationship with Jaden and her continued role as a caring maternal figure.
- Foreshadowing Isolation Attempts:
 - This financial support underscores the genuine bond between June and Jaden, which Lindsey likely sought to undermine to justify later exclusionary behavior.

November 22, 2016

Date: November 22, 2016

June's Age: 65 years old

Text from June (Aligned to the Left):

"Hi. We are going to Moonshine. You are invited to come. It was my choice for restaurant since I am paying. Please come if you want. I pay for everything. When you pay, you can choose."

Text from Jaden (Aligned to the Right):

"Yes ma'am. What time should I be at your house?"

Analysis

Behavioral Indicators (Cognitive Decline):

- Passive-Aggressiveness and Emotional Dysregulation:
 - June's comment, "When you pay, you can choose," reflects an uncharacteristic passive-aggressiveness, which may indicate emerging emotional dysregulation—a hallmark of FTD. This tone is inconsistent with her earlier warmth and patience in communication.

Maternal Relationship:

- Control Over Decisions:
 - June's assertion of control over the restaurant choice indicates her ongoing effort to maintain agency, possibly reflecting an anxiety over losing independence. While still engaging Jaden, the tone reflects a subtle shift away from the supportive dynamic previously seen.

Exclusion by Lindsey:

- Foundation for Manipulation:
 - This subtle shift in tone and emotional instability could have been exploited by Lindsey to further isolate Jaden, painting her as ungrateful or difficult. The emphasis on control may also highlight June's growing frustration, which could have been fueled by Lindsey's influence.

Relevance to FTD and/or ARD:

- Indicators of Emotional Dysregulation:

- The passive-aggressive tone is consistent with the emotional instability often observed in individuals with FTD. This exchange may represent the stages of behavioral changes caused by cognitive decline.

Additional Context Beyond the Text Message:

- Alcohol's Role in Emotional Dysregulation:
 - Given June's known drinking habits, alcohol may have further exacerbated her emotional instability, contributing to the passive-aggressiveness seen in this text.

Key Takeaway:

- Signs of Cognitive Decline and Emotional Instability:
 - June's passive-aggressiveness and difficulty regulating her emotions align with FTD.
- Potential Manipulation by Lindsey:
 - June's subtle shift in tone could have been used by Lindsey to reinforce a narrative of estrangement between Jaden and June, enabling further isolation.

June's Age: 65 years old

Text from Jaden (Aligned to the Right, sent while standing outside Moonshine):

"Here, where are you?"

"We are in 4 Seasons bar. Street level."

Text from Jaden (Aligned to the Right, replying from Moonshine several blocks away):

"Be there in a few mins."

"By the loud TV."

Analysis:

Behavioral Indicators (Cognitive Decline):

- Failure to Communicate the Change in Plans:
 - June's failure to inform Jaden of the venue change is a major red flag for executive dysfunction and memory impairment, both of which are hallmark symptoms of frontotemporal dementia (FTD) and alcohol-related dementia (ARD).
 - She appears unaware that she never told Jaden about the restaurant change, despite later insisting that she had already mentioned it. This reflects cognitive confusion and impaired planning ability, both of which are consistent with dementia.
- Impatience and Emotional Detachment:
 - Instead of apologizing or acknowledging the mistake, June responds tritely with, "By the loud TV." This lack of engagement and dismissiveness is uncharacteristic of her prior warmth and attentiveness in conversations.
 - This emotional detachment—failing to consider Jaden's feelings about being forgotten—suggests diminished empathy and social awareness, common in FTD patients as the disease affects the brain's ability to process emotions and interpersonal relationships.
- Rigid Thinking and Inability to Adjust to Social Norms:

- Rather than acknowledging the obvious social misstep of not informing Jaden about the change in plans, June continues the conversation as if nothing is amiss, displaying rigid, inflexible thinking, which is another symptom of FTD.
- Alcohol Consumption:
 - June is already at the Four Seasons bar, drinking a Bloody Mary when Jaden arrives. Given her known history of alcohol use, this raises concerns about alcohol's role in exacerbating cognitive impairment and emotional dysregulation. Chronic alcohol use is a significant risk factor for ARD, which mimics symptoms of FTD.

Maternal Relationship:

- A Major Shift in How June Interacted with Jaden:
 - This moment is one of the first instances where Jaden felt genuinely uncomfortable around June, marking a pivotal shift in their relationship.
 - Previously, June had been warm, inclusive, and thoughtful. In contrast, this exchange shows her as detached, dismissive, and indifferent to Jaden's feelings—a drastic change from her earlier role as a maternal figure.
- Break in Trust and Emotional Safety:
 - The failure to communicate an important change in plans and her indifference to Jaden's confusion and hurt feelings fractured the emotional safety that had defined their relationship.
 - Jaden, unaware of dementia at the time, interpreted this as hostility—leading to emotional withdrawal and a temporary distancing from June.

Exclusion by Lindsey:

- A Moment That Enabled Future Isolation:
 - This seemingly minor incident of failing to inform Jaden about the restaurant change actually set a critical precedent for future exclusion.
 - If Lindsey had intentionally failed to inform Jaden about the change, this could have been a step in systematically isolating her from June.
- Lindsey and Jonathan's Presence at the Bar:
 - June was already with Lindsey and Jonathan at the Four Seasons when Jaden arrived. This suggests that Lindsey may have ensured Jaden was excluded from the planning process, reinforcing Jaden's gradual erasure from family gatherings.
 - The limited family size made it easier for Lindsey to execute this exclusion without attracting suspicion.

Relevance to FTD and/or ARD:

- Memory Impairment and Poor Communication:

- June's inability to recognize that she never told Jaden about the venue change suggests short-term memory deficits and executive dysfunction, both of which are common in FTD and ARD.
- Impaired Emotional Processing and Lack of Empathy:
 - The bluntness and dismissiveness of her final response, "By the loud TV," reflects impaired social cognition, another hallmark of FTD, where individuals lose the ability to read social cues and respond appropriately to emotional situations.
- Alcohol as a Cognitive Risk Factor:
 - Given June's drinking history, the role of chronic alcohol use in accelerating cognitive decline cannot be ignored. ARD symptoms often overlap with FTD symptoms, and June already displayed behaviors linked to both.

Additional Context Beyond the Text Message:

- A Crucial Moment in Jaden's Awareness of Change:
 - While Jaden didn't recognize dementia at the time, this moment felt fundamentally different from past interactions. The lack of warmth, empathy, or basic communication left Jaden feeling unwanted and confused.
- Why Jaden Didn't Attend Hanukkah in December 2016:
 - The emotional fallout from this Thanksgiving incident led to Jaden declining the next family gathering (Hanukkah, December 2016).
 - At the time, Jaden didn't understand why June had changed so much and needed time to process this abrupt and painful shift in their relationship.
- Pattern of Alcohol-Influenced Incidents:
 - This event, combined with June's drinking at family gatherings, provides an indicator of alcohol's role in her cognitive decline and how it altered her personality.
- How Lindsey Used This to Further Isolate Jaden:
 - Lindsey may have exploited June's behavior that day to further paint a false narrative that Jaden was oversensitive, difficult, or absent from family events by choice—when in reality, June's unpredictable hostility made Jaden hesitant to engage.
- Jaden's Evolving Understanding of Dementia (2020 and later):
 - At the time of this incident in 2016, Jaden had no knowledge of dementia or its symptoms. She only began to understand the complexity of cognitive decline and how it affects behavior during her 2020 training with Hospice Austin as a Patient and Family Respite Caregiver.

- Through this training, Jaden gained expertise in recognizing the signs of dementia, the challenges faced by caregivers, and strategies for improving the quality of life for individuals experiencing cognitive decline. By the time of the COVID-19 pandemic, Jaden was well-equipped with knowledge and resources that could have helped bring comfort, safety, and love to June's life while alleviating the caregiving burdens Lindsey and Jonathan described on March 18, 2023.
- Jaden's later understanding of dementia provided clarity about June's combative behavior, emotional dysregulation, and hostility, which were not personal but symptoms of her declining health. With this knowledge, Jaden could have played a crucial role in managing June's care during the COVID lockdown years, particularly in light of Lindsey and Jonathan's descriptions of how challenging it was to manage June's hygiene issues, emotional outbursts, and combative episodes.

Key Takeaway:

- June's failure to inform Jaden about the venue change, coupled with her cold reaction, represents a critical shift in their relationship—marking one of the first moments Jaden felt alienated and uncomfortable around June.
- Signs of cognitive decline are evident in June's poor communication, memory lapses, and inability to recognize or address Jaden's feelings.
- Alcohol consumption played a likely role in exacerbating her cognitive and emotional instability, reinforcing its connection to ARD and FTD.
- This was a key moment of isolation—one that Lindsey likely used as a foundation to push Jaden further away in future interactions.

December 14, 2016

Date: December 14, 2016

June's Age: 65 years old

"Are you joining us for Christmas Eve at Chinatown?"

Text from Jaden (Aligned to the Right):

"No, you guys have fun with that feast. Did you decide to go with the duck this year? You were iffy about doing it again."

Text from June (Aligned to the Left):

"Dinner was very good. Got seated immediately. Having latkes at Lindsey's tomorrow around 2 or 3 if you'd like to come over."

Text from Jaden (Aligned to the Right):

"Hey June, I was asleep. I won't be there this year. I can't believe there was no line. OK, I'm running late, I need to jump in the shower. Love you both."

Text from June (Aligned to the Left):

"Sorry. We will miss you, Be safe."

Analysis

Behavioral Indicators (Cognitive Decline):

- Reduced Emotional Engagement and Social Connection:
 - Unlike previous years where June was highly involved in ensuring Jaden's presence at family events, her lack of follow-up or encouragement when Jaden declined is notable. Instead of pressing for a reason or trying to make Jaden feel included, she simply moves on, which could indicate diminished emotional investment—a symptom often seen in FTD and ARD patients.
- Diminished Empathy and Understanding of Emotional Dynamics:

- June fails to acknowledge any underlying reason for Jaden's decision to not attend, despite the significant fallout from Thanksgiving 2016. This lack of emotional reciprocity—where she does not inquire further, express concern, or reassure Jaden—is starkly different from her pre-2016 personality.
- This emotional blunting and failure to engage in deeper discussion could reflect atrophy in the frontal lobes, which regulate empathy and emotional processing.
- Surface-Level Interaction Without True Engagement:
 - Her tone appears detached—she extends an invitation, provides a basic recap of dinner, and mentions another event without actively ensuring Jaden feels welcome.
 - The impersonal nature of her text contrasts with earlier messages, where she actively reassured and encouraged Jaden's participation in family gatherings.
- Rigid Thinking and Repetitive Behavior:
 - June still follows her established holiday routine (Chinatown for Christmas Eve and latkes the next day), even after Jaden declined to participate.
 - This rigid adherence to routine, despite an obvious shift in family dynamics, could signal reduced cognitive flexibility, often seen in FTD patients who struggle with adapting to change.

Maternal Relationship:

- Lack of Encouragement and Emotional Connection:
 - In contrast to previous years, June does not attempt to persuade or encourage Jaden to attend.
 - Previously, she actively expressed excitement about Jaden joining family events, often urging her to come and ensuring she felt wanted. The absence of this nurturing element indicates a deviation from her previous maternal behavior.
- Missed Opportunity for Reconciliation:
 - Given the Thanksgiving incident a month prior, this could have been a moment for June to reaffirm her love and mend the rift.
 - However, her flat and transactional response suggests diminished emotional insight, which is common in individuals with dementia.

Exclusion by Lindsey:

- Further Isolation from Family Gatherings:
 - This exchange marks another step in Jaden's exclusion.
 - Lindsey, who was present at Thanksgiving, may have reinforced the divide, preventing any reconciliation efforts between June and Jaden.
 - If Lindsey had influenced June's perception of Jaden, it would have been in her best interest to limit opportunities for direct engagement, ensuring that any misunderstandings remained unresolved.

- June's Shift Toward a Lindsey-Centric Family Dynamic:

- June mentions Lindsey's event but does not make a strong case for Jaden to attend.
- This suggests that Lindsey's influence over June continued to grow, reinforcing an exclusive family structure that did not include Jaden.

Relevance to FTD and/or ARD:

- Loss of Social Insight and Emotional Reciprocity:

- June's failure to acknowledge Jaden's absence in a meaningful way and her lack of effort to bridge the gap reflect symptoms of FTD—specifically, a decline in emotional reasoning and relationship management.

- Rigid Thinking and Routine-Based Behavior:

- June's continued adherence to her holiday plans without adapting to the emotional reality of family tension is a potential sign of executive function decline, common in FTD patients.

- Flattened Emotional Response:

- The lack of distress or concern in June's response contrasts with her prior behavior, where she would have expressed more warmth or attempted to bring Jaden back into the fold.

Additional Context Beyond the Text Message:

- This Exchange Marks the Aftermath of Thanksgiving 2016:

- Jaden was still emotionally processing the painful Thanksgiving incident, where June had been aggressive, defensive, and uncharacteristically unkind.
- The hesitation to attend Christmas Eve likely stemmed from a desire to avoid another emotionally painful experience.

- Jaden's Declining Role in Family Gatherings:

- At this point, Lindsey's efforts to isolate Jaden were taking effect.
- With June's diminishing cognitive awareness, she was less likely to resist Lindsey's influence and more likely to accept an altered family dynamic where Jaden was no longer prioritized.

- Potential Influence of Alcohol:

- While alcohol is not explicitly mentioned in this exchange, June's historical pattern of drinking at family events suggests that cognitive impairment caused by alcohol-related dementia (ARD) could have played a role in her emotional flatness and lack of effort to reconnect with Jaden.

Key Takeaway:

- June's lack of encouragement for Jaden to attend family gatherings represents a fundamental shift in their relationship, consistent with cognitive decline.
- Her failure to address or repair the Thanksgiving fallout reflects a diminished ability to process interpersonal conflicts, a symptom of FTD.
- Lindsey's role in Jaden's isolation is increasingly evident, as June makes no effort to push for Jaden's presence at the holiday gathering.
- This exchange foreshadows further emotional withdrawal from Jaden, reinforcing Lindsey's efforts to erase her from the family structure.

February 28, 2017

Date: February 28, 2017

June's Age: 65 years old

Text from June (Aligned to the Left):

"Hello"

"Come to wedding. We love you."

"I'm wearing black pants and jacket."

"Conevtobeasyvtigetctoo" (Unintelligible typing, now believed to mean "Come to the Easy Tiger")

"Easy Tiger"

"My only text. Love you. I have a bridezilla. Overwhelming. Plus your mom."

Text from Jaden (Aligned to the Right):

(No response appears in this text message screenshot. Jaden's next response is on March 2, 2017, suggesting a definite phone call occurred in response to June's confusing message.)

Analysis

Behavioral Indicators (Cognitive Decline):

- Severe Breakdown in Communication Clarity ("Conevtobeasyvtigetctoo")
 - This unintelligible phrase was likely intended to say "Come to the Easy Tiger," referring to a cocktail party mentioned in a March 2nd text.
 - The fact that June followed up with "Easy Tiger" on the next line but did not clarify the message suggests that she believed she was communicating effectively, even when she was not as Jaden had no idea what "Easy Tiger" meant..
 - This disconnect between intent and clarity is a key sign of cognitive dysfunction, particularly executive function failure, which is common in frontotemporal dementia (FTD).
- A Documented Patterned Communication Breakdown Has Developed
 - Prior to June's November 2016 texts, her written communication was consistently clear, structured, and logical. However, in November 2016—during a time when she had been drinking—her messages began to show signs of decline, including shifts in tone and coherence. Despite this, until today's message, she had never exhibited such a severe breakdown in communication clarity.
 - This was a major turning point, marking the second documented occurrence of an onset of intermittent, patterned episodes in which Jaden noticed a striking deterioration in June's written communication skills—so severe that he could no longer interpret her messages and had to rely on phone calls for clarification

- In earlier years (2014-2016), June's texts were grammatically correct, structured, and easy to follow though there were signs of memory loss and a deterioration in the ability to communicate on November 24, 2016, either because June was drinking or related to some form of cognitive decline, or both concurrently. This stands out starkly as it lacks punctuation, clarity, and context, showing an obvious deterioration in her ability to organize thoughts due to either cognitive decline or recent alcohol consumption, or both concurrently.

- Loss of Punctuation and Sentence Structure

- This message lacks periods or proper sentence separation, creating an abrupt, disorganized flow.
- FTD often impacts written communication first, with patients losing the ability to self-edit and structure sentences logically.
- While this pattern first became evident in November of 2016, this text message further supports that a pattern has developed supporting the claims of declining executive function and language processing.

- Emotional Dysregulation and Filtering Issues ("Bridezilla. Overwhelming. Plus your mom.")

- June jumps from loving and inclusive ("Come to wedding. We love you") to stressed and overwhelmed ("Bridezilla. Overwhelming. Plus your mom.") within the same message.
- This abrupt emotional switch suggests diminished impulse control and a reduced ability to regulate emotions—both of which are common in FTD and alcohol-related dementia (ARD).
- Her unfiltered complaints about Lindsey and Jaden's mother reflect a growing loss of inhibition, another FTD symptom.

Maternal Relationship:

- Still Demonstrates Warmth and Inclusion

- June's "Come to wedding. We love you." shows that she still recognized Jaden as part of the family and wanted her there.
- The use of "we" suggests June assumed Lindsey shared this sentiment, despite Lindsey's actions contradicting this idea.

- June's Growing Reliance on Jaden for Emotional Support

- June immediately shifts from inclusion to venting about Lindsey and Jaden's mother, signaling that she still viewed Jaden as a trusted confidant.
- However, the bluntness and lack of context in this venting suggests diminishing social awareness, which is a red flag for cognitive decline.

Exclusion by Lindsey:

- June's Invitation Contradicts Lindsey's Exclusionary Behavior
 - June's message implies Jaden was naturally included in wedding events, but Lindsey's behavior throughout the wedding planning process suggests otherwise.
 - Lindsey did not personally invite Jaden to many pre-wedding events, reinforcing a growing pattern of exclusion.
- June's Worsening Communication Allowed Lindsey to Control the Narrative
 - Because June's messages were so unclear, Lindsey could have manipulated the situation by telling others (or even June herself) that Jaden was uninterested or unresponsive.
 - This aligns with the broader theme of Lindsey exploiting June's cognitive decline to isolate Jaden from the family structure.

Relevance to FTD and/or ARD:

- Executive Dysfunction in Written Communication
 - June's inability to structure a clear message suggests that her cognitive processing was declining.
 - The failure to properly explain "Easy Tiger" and the missing sentence structure indicates deteriorating executive function, which is a marker of dementia.
- Alcohol as a Likely Factor in Worsening Communication
 - June's history strongly suggests that she drank often and at every social event. Given that she was the mother of the bride, funding wedding events, and attending multiple gatherings, it is almost certain that she was drinking regularly throughout this period.
 - Alcohol consumption would exacerbate cognitive symptoms by increasing impulsivity, worsening memory issues, and impairing executive function.
 - This raises the possibility that June was intoxicated when she sent this message, which could explain:
 - The incomprehensible text ("Conevtobeasyvtigetctoo")
 - The lack of punctuation and proper structure
 - The abrupt emotional shift in tone
 - The failure to clarify her meaning after typing "Easy Tiger"

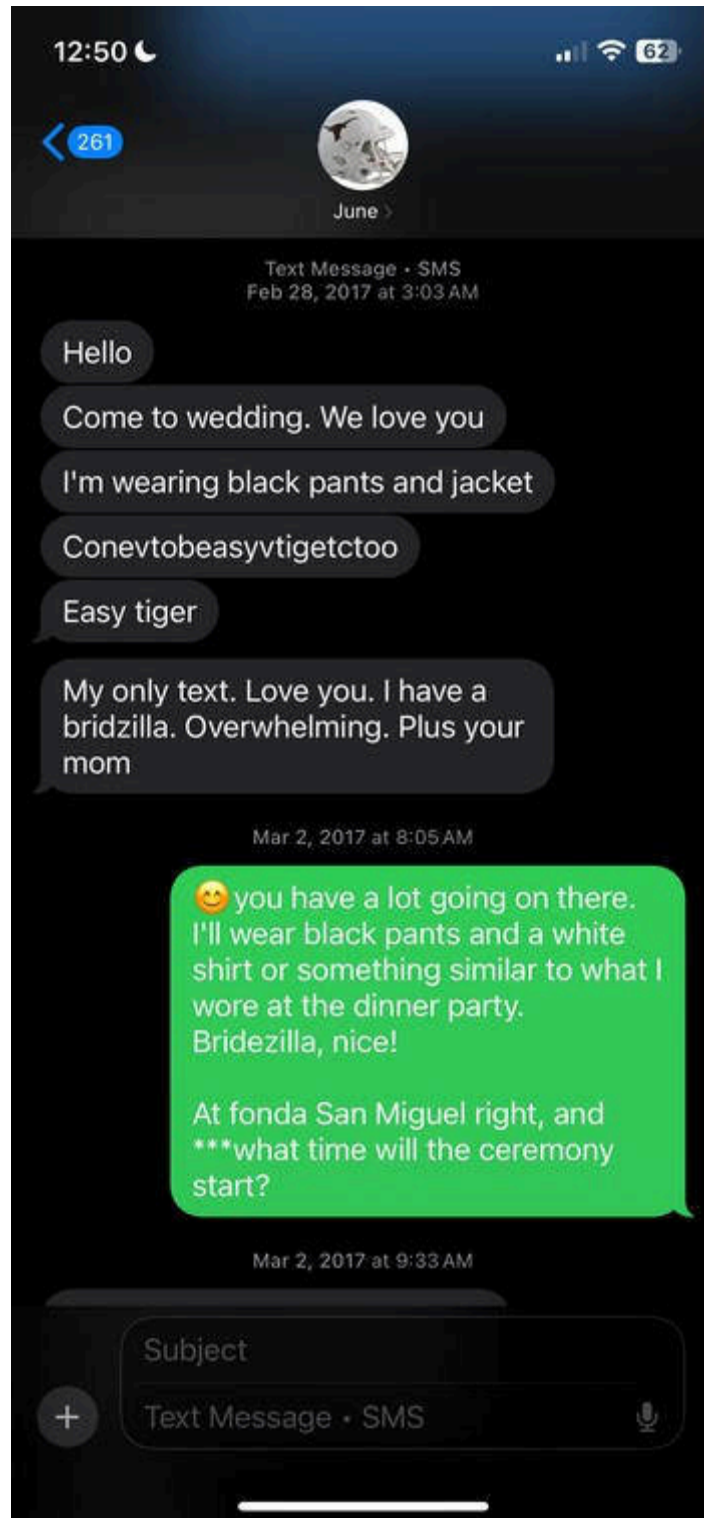

Additional Context Beyond the Text Message:

- Jaden's Confusion and Definite Phone Call
 - Since Jaden did not respond in text until March 2, it is certain that she called June for clarification.

- This marks a major shift in their communication dynamic—where text messages were no longer reliable, and verbal follow-ups became necessary.
- June's Language Processing Decline Was Now Affecting Event Planning
 - Prior to this, June had never struggled to provide clear logistical details.
 - Now, her inability to clearly communicate an event invitation reflects a significant drop in cognitive function.
- Increasing Dependence on Alcohol During Wedding Planning
 - June was not only drinking at the wedding events themselves but likely using alcohol as a coping mechanism throughout the planning process.
 - Her inability to clearly communicate in this message could be partially attributed to intoxication, which would amplify her existing cognitive issues.

Key Takeaway:

- June's language processing failure in this message is a critical milestone in her cognitive decline.
- Her inability to clearly structure an invitation (even after attempting to correct it) suggests executive function impairment.
- This was the first time Jaden could not understand a message and had to rely on a phone call, marking a shift in how they communicated.
- June's failure to recognize how confusing her message was suggests she was unaware of her own decline.
- Alcohol likely played a role in her declining communication abilities, particularly during wedding-related events.
- June's text invites Jaden, but Lindsey's growing control over family interactions likely contributed to Jaden's eventual exclusion.

March 02, 2017

Date: March 2, 2017

June's Age: 65 years old

Text from Jaden (Aligned to the Right):

"At Fonda San Miguel right, and what time will the ceremony start?"*

Text from June (Aligned to the Left):

"Sundown. Come earlier. I'll be there. What about easy tiger cocktail party and Jeffrey's for dinner"

"On Friday"

Text from Jaden (Aligned to the Right):

"Pass on the cocktail party. How many people will be at Jeffrey's?"

"Jeffreys"

"10"

Text from Jaden (Aligned to the Right):

"That's a lot of people. Isn't Jeffrey's expensive? You're going all out."

Analysis

Behavioral Indicators (Cognitive Decline):

- June's Shifting Focus and Lack of Clear Response:
 - Jaden's initial question asks for the wedding ceremony start time—a straightforward logistical question.
 - Instead of providing a direct answer, June responds vaguely and shifts the topic to the Easy Tiger cocktail party and Jeffrey's for dinner.
 - This abrupt topic change suggests difficulty maintaining focus and responding appropriately, which is a cognitive processing issue consistent with FTD symptoms.
- Executive Dysfunction in Communication:
 - June fails to answer Jaden's question before abruptly switching topics, showing reduced ability to organize and structure conversations.

- Jaden asks a clear logistical question ("What time will the ceremony start?"), but June does not directly answer, instead talking about pre-wedding events.
- This inability to provide a direct answer and stay on-topic suggests cognitive disorganization.
- Shortened, Abrupt Responses ("10.")
 - June's response of simply "10." when asked about the number of guests is noticeably terse and uncharacteristically blunt.
 - In contrast, her earlier years of communication (2014-2016) included more conversational engagement and complete sentences.
 - This shift could indicate cognitive strain, difficulty articulating details, or a decline in social engagement—hallmarks of FTD.
- Potential Alcohol Influence:
 - Given June's documented history of drinking at social events, it is highly likely that she was regularly drinking during pre-wedding events.
 - The Easy Tiger cocktail party reference reinforces alcohol's presence as a major part of these events.
 - Alcohol use, especially in chronic heavy drinkers, exacerbates dementia symptoms, impairing memory, focus, and executive function.

Maternal Relationship:

- Still Trying to Include Jaden in Family Events:
 - Despite communication issues and cognitive inconsistencies, June is actively inviting Jaden to both the cocktail party and dinner.
 - This suggests that at this point, she still viewed Jaden as part of the family dynamic and wanted her present.
- June's Role as the Go-Between:
 - June appears to be the one ensuring Jaden is included, rather than Lindsey directly inviting Jaden.
 - This suggests that June still valued Jaden's presence, but Lindsey's direct engagement was lacking.

Exclusion by Lindsey:

- Lindsey's Pattern of Indirect Invitations Through June:
 - The fact that June is the one mentioning the pre-wedding events, not Lindsey, supports the fact that Lindsey did not personally invite Jaden.
 - This reinforces the pattern of Lindsey keeping Jaden at arm's length while maintaining surface-level inclusivity.

Relevance to FTD and/or ARD:

- Cognitive Disorganization in Conversation:
 - June's failure to provide a direct answer to a simple logistical question highlights executive dysfunction.
 - The topic change from ceremony logistics to pre-wedding events suggests impaired ability to stay on task.
- Increasingly Abrupt and Shortened Responses:
 - June's one-word response ("10.") is noticeably brief, lacking the conversational engagement of previous years.
 - This pattern aligns with FTD's impact on language processing, where individuals struggle to form complex responses.
- Alcohol Consumption Likely Worsening Symptoms:
 - Given June's known drinking habits and the context of the pre-wedding social events, alcohol likely played a role in her cognitive state.
 - Alcohol worsens memory issues, decision-making, and executive function—exacerbating existing dementia symptoms.

Additional Context Beyond the Text Message:

- June's Difficulty with Following Conversations Was Increasing:
 - While previous years showed consistent, structured conversations, this exchange shows clear disorganization and an inability to provide direct answers.
- Jaden Was Still Making Efforts to Participate:
 - Despite being excluded from aspects of the wedding planning, Jaden was still actively trying to engage, ask questions, and be involved.

Key Takeaway:

- June's communication breakdown in this message is a clear marker of cognitive decline.
- June shifts topics abruptly, cannot stay focused, and provides short, vague responses—all indicators of FTD.
- Lindsey's exclusionary tactics were subtle but effective.
- Alcohol was likely a contributing factor to June's increasing communication struggles, impairing her ability to provide clear responses.
- Jaden was still trying to be engaged, but the increasing cognitive decline and exclusionary barriers made it harder to stay involved.

March 03, 2017

Date: March 3, 2017

June's Age: 65 years old

Text from Jaden (Aligned to the Right):

"Presently, I'm not great at socializing with strangers, but I want to watch my little cousin get married and cry 😭 ... then I'll cry too."

"I'll congratulate June. It's your day too, an epic mommy moment. I'll see you at Fonda San Miguel. What time will the actual ceremony start?"

(No response appears in this text message screenshot.)

Analysis

Behavioral Indicators (Cognitive Decline):

- June's Lack of Response to a Meaningful Message:
 - June's failure to acknowledge Jaden's heartfelt and warm message is highly unusual based on their history.
 - Jaden's message clearly expresses emotion, vulnerability, and warmth, acknowledging June's special role in the wedding. The fact that June does not respond at all suggests she may have been:
 - Experiencing cognitive overload from the wedding events.
 - Emotionally detached, which aligns with symptoms of FTD.
 - Heavily drinking, impairing her ability to process and respond.
- Contrast with Past Conversations:
 - June's prior texts throughout the years show an engaged and responsive personality.
 - Even in previous stressful events, she typically acknowledged emotional statements like this.
 - The absence of any reply here is a strong indicator of either emotional blunting (common in FTD) or a situational cognitive impairment caused by excessive alcohol consumption.

Maternal Relationship:

- Jaden's Effort to Acknowledge June's Role:

- Despite previous tensions and being excluded from certain wedding-related events, Jaden still recognizes the importance of this moment for June.
- The phrase “It’s your day too, an epic mommy moment” reinforces that Jaden still saw June in a maternal light, honoring her as an important figure in the family.
- June’s Silence Reflects a Shift in Emotional Engagement:
 - Historically, June would have responded with excitement or appreciation.
 - The lack of response could suggest emotional disengagement either due to cognitive decline or external influences (such as Lindsey discouraging June from engaging with Jaden).
 - This is a stark contrast to how June had always treated Jaden in the past.

Exclusion by Lindsey:

- Jaden’s Sole Communication with June Shows Lindsey’s Increasing Distance:
 - Despite being Lindsey’s cousin, Jaden had no direct texts with Lindsey about her own wedding.
 - This underscores Lindsey’s deliberate efforts to distance Jaden, further solidifying that she had no intention of treating Jaden as family.
 - This is particularly noteworthy because June had previously emphasized that Jaden was Lindsey’s only family.
- Exclusion from the "Family Portion" of the Ceremony:
 - During the wedding ceremony, an announcement was made instructing the families of the bride and groom to move to a back room to prepare for the ceremony.
 - Jaden, unsure whether she was included as family, looked to June for guidance. June affirmed that Jaden was Lindsey’s only family and that she should be included.
 - However, Jaden was later directly told by a man (possibly from Jonathan’s side or wedding staff) that “only immediate family” was allowed and that she was not welcome in the family portion of the ceremony.
 - This was a direct rejection of Jaden’s role as Lindsey’s cousin, reinforcing Lindsey’s exclusionary tactics.
 - June even attempted to advocate for Jaden’s inclusion, but Lindsey refused.
- June and Jaden’s Time Together After the Ceremony:
 - After the wedding ceremony, Jaden spent much of the evening with June, who was heavily intoxicated.
 - June reminisced about Lindsey’s childhood, recalling memories that only Jaden could understand.
 - This conversation further validated Jaden’s lifelong presence in Lindsey’s life and the unique bond she shared with June.

- Despite Lindsey's efforts to remove Jaden from the family dynamic, this moment with June demonstrated that Jaden was, in fact, an integral part of the family history.

Relevance to FTD and/or ARD:

- Lack of Response Aligns with Symptoms of Emotional Blunting:
 - FTD often reduces a person's ability to engage emotionally, even in significant moments.
 - June's failure to acknowledge Jaden's heartfelt message is consistent with this symptom.
- Possible Alcohol-Induced Cognitive Impairment:
 - Given that June was heavily drinking throughout the wedding events, her lack of response could have been exacerbated by intoxication.
 - Alcohol impairs short-term memory, emotional regulation, and executive function, all of which could explain her disengagement.

Additional Context Beyond the Text Message:

- Jaden's Internal Struggles During This Time:
 - As previously noted, Jaden was actively working through deep personal trauma in therapy which contributed to her not feeling particularly sociable during Lindsey's wedding, but Jaden recognized her cousin's wedding as a milestone event and wanted to be there to support her aunt and her cousin.
 - The exclusion from Lindsey, combined with June's growing disengagement, made this event bittersweet for Jaden.
 - Despite these barriers, Jaden remained committed to family and still wanted to celebrate Lindsey and honor June.
- Pattern of Emotional Withdrawal from June:
 - June had already started to show signs of distancing from Jaden in past texts.
 - The lack of response here reinforces that her cognitive and emotional engagement were declining.
 - Lindsey would later confirm through texts and phone conversations she had with Jaden that June was also behaving differently with her.
- June's Increasing Isolation from Jaden Was Not Her Choice:
 - Despite Lindsey's efforts to distance Jaden, June still gravitated toward Jaden after the ceremony, sharing personal memories and reflections about Lindsey's childhood.
 - This further supports that June still viewed Jaden as a meaningful and trusted family member, even as Lindsey worked to sever the connection.

Key Takeaway:

- June's lack of response marks a shift in her emotional engagement, suggesting increasing emotional withdrawal, executive dysfunction, or external influence.
- Jaden was still making efforts to support and validate June, despite being excluded from direct communication with Lindsey.
- June's cognitive impairment, paired with her likely alcohol consumption, could have played a role in her silence.
- This is yet another piece of evidence showing that Lindsey successfully created distance between June and Jaden, paving the way for her ultimate exclusion from June's estate planning.
- Despite Lindsey's efforts, June still valued Jaden's presence and relied on her for emotional support during the wedding.
- The exclusion from the family portion of the ceremony serves as one of the clearest examples of Lindsey's deliberate isolation of Jaden as a notable member of the family.

November 23, 2017

Date: November 23, 2017

June's Age: 66 years old

Text from Jaden (Aligned to the Right):

"Little late, way overshoot my Mopac exit."

"K having a Bloody Mary. See you soon."

Text from Jaden (Aligned to the Right):

"I'm missing your traditional Bloody Mary!"

"We are at table #16."

Analysis

Behavioral Indicators (Cognitive Decline):

- June's Immediate Mention of Alcohol Instead of Acknowledging Jaden's Message:
 - Jaden mentions being late due to missing her exit, but June completely ignores this and instead only acknowledges drinking alcohol.
 - This suggests a shift in conversational focus and an inability to engage in normal back-and-forth exchanges, which can be a sign of executive dysfunction or reduced social awareness, common in FTD.
- Over-Reliance on Routine to Maintain Normalcy:
 - June's first instinct is to mention the Bloody Mary, reinforcing the idea that her long-standing drinking habits were a central feature of her routine.
 - People with dementia often cling to long-standing habits and rituals as a way to maintain stability even as their cognitive abilities decline.
- Abrupt and Minimal Responses Suggest Emotional Blunting:
 - In previous years, June's texts were more conversational, expressive, and interactive.
 - The text in the screenshot preceding November 23rd was written on November 20th, which shows a greater level of social engagement. Symptoms of dementia do not display consistently, but intermittently with increasing regularity over time.

Here, on November 23rd, June's messages are short, transactional, and lack emotional engagement.

- The lack of warmth or acknowledgment of Jaden's message could indicate progressive FTD-related emotional withdrawal.

Maternal Relationship:

- Jaden's Acknowledgment of Tradition Shows Long-Term Bond:
 - Jaden's comment about "missing your traditional Bloody Mary" shows that this was a well-established family custom.
 - This suggests that June and Jaden had shared many holiday meals together, reinforcing their familial closeness and June's appreciation of Bloody Mary's.
- June's Response Lacks Emotional Recognition of Jaden's Statement:
 - While Jaden's message carries warmth and nostalgia, June does not reciprocate in kind.
 - This could indicate diminished emotional recognition, which is a hallmark symptom of FTD.

Relevance to FTD and/or ARD:

- June's Drinking Pattern Is Fully Intact in Her Mid-60s:
 - By age 66, June was still consuming alcohol regularly and openly during family gatherings.
 - Her habitual drinking at social events is significant in the context of alcohol-related dementia (ARD), which is linked to long-term heavy alcohol consumption.
 - This text further solidifies the well-established pattern of alcohol being a central part of June's life and interactions.
- Cognitive Rigidity & Lack of Conversational Flexibility:
 - Instead of engaging in a dynamic conversation, June clings to a well-established ritual (drinking Bloody Marys).
 - People with FTD often struggle with cognitive flexibility, meaning they rely on repetitive habits to maintain a sense of normalcy.
- Emotional Blunting & Executive Dysfunction:
 - June ignores Jaden's friendly comment about missing her traditional drink and instead gives a short, emotionless update.
 - This lack of emotional reciprocation is a core symptom of FTD.

Additional Context Beyond the Text Message:

- Drinking Was a Long-Established Thanksgiving Tradition:

- The mention of Bloody Marys reinforces that June's drinking at social gatherings was a deeply ingrained tradition.
- This text serves as further documentation that June's alcohol consumption was consistent and habitual, making it a likely contributing factor to ARD.
- Pattern of Emotional Withdrawal Continues:
 - As with previous texts, June does not engage in any personal conversation with Jaden.
 - While she acknowledges Jaden's arrival, she does so in the most minimal and transactional way possible.
 - This shift in interpersonal engagement is consistent with FTD-related emotional blunting.
- June's Cognitive & Emotional Changes Were Happening Before 2021:
 - The signs of executive dysfunction, emotional blunting, and reliance on routine were already present in 2017.
 - If these symptoms were evident four years before her will was changed, it raises significant doubts about her ability to make informed legal decisions in 2021.

Key Takeaway:

- June's immediate mention of alcohol instead of engaging in conversation suggests a narrowing of cognitive flexibility and reliance on routine.
- Her responses lack emotional engagement, reinforcing signs of emotional blunting, a key symptom of FTD.
- By this point, Lindsey's role in isolating Jaden was apparent, as June remained Jaden's only link to family gatherings.
- June's habitual drinking at age 66 strengthens the pattern of lifelong alcohol consumption, supporting concerns about alcohol-related dementia (ARD).
- This moment serves as further proof that June's cognitive and emotional capacity was deteriorating well before her will was changed.

Comprehensive Analysis of December 28, 2017 Text Conversation

Date: December 28, 2017

June's Age: 66 years old

This analysis covers all four text exchanges from December 28, 2017, as part of a single overarching conversation that includes phone calls, text messages, an in-person meeting over lunch, and a follow-up exchange later that evening.

Text Messages Overview

"Getting in shower. Do you want to meet for lunch in an hour?"

Jaden (Aligned to the Right):

"Just you?"

"Yes."

Jaden (Aligned to the Right):

"Sure."

"Just got out of the shower. Where should we have lunch? Your choice. I don't drive Mopac."

Jaden (Aligned to the Right):

"What's near you then, I do think usually eat out. We could do coffee?"

June (Aligned to the Left):

"I need food."

"Whataburger on Anderson."

Jaden (Aligned to the Right):

"See you there."

"Give me 30."

Jaden (Aligned to the Right):

"2:30 then sounds good."

**"👍"*

"I'm here."

Jaden (Aligned to the Right):

"Inside at a table."

Jaden (Aligned to the Right) at 6:03 PM:

"Thanks for today June. All I wanted was to know was rather or not you were really with me and cared. I know how weird that must sound to you. I'm really pretty happy right this moment and I don't feel so alone. 💕 Thanks for listening. And the burger too, it was good but you were better."

"You are more than welcome. I'm sad you lost your job, but it won't be long until you are back at work. I had a nice visit too. Keep me up to date. 🐱"

June (Aligned to the Left) at 11:44 PM:

"I just danced my ass off to Elton's I'm Still Standing."

"Kudos to you."

"Be well."

"Quite a sight."

Jaden (Aligned to the Right):

<GIF>

"Here's hoping you're a better dancer than this guy."

"But you made me laugh! June dancing her ass off, final thoughts before falling asleep."

"I had to look it up, awesome!"

Analysis

Behavioral Indicators (Cognitive Decline)

- No Signs of Emotional Dysregulation or Paranoia in This Conversation
 - June's behavior throughout this exchange is stable, supportive, and engaged.
 - She does not display hostility, defensiveness, or erratic messaging, which are present in later texts.
 - This suggests that FTD symptoms fluctuated, with moments of clarity and normalcy still intact at this point.
- Driving Avoidance & Possible Executive Function Decline
 - June's avoidance of Mopac (a major highway in Austin) was previously mentioned in November 2017 and November 2016 texts.

- This could indicate:
 - Anxiety related to complex driving situations.
 - Reduced reaction speed or confidence in making quick driving decisions.
 - A cognitive decline in executive functioning, which can manifest as hesitation with tasks that require spatial and situational awareness.
- Preserved Social Awareness and Humor
 - June's text tone remains light, affectionate, and socially appropriate.
 - The playful exchange about dancing and music reflects an ability to engage in shared experiences and humor, which were diminishing in later texts.
- Absence of Alcohol in This Meeting
 - June's clarity, warmth, and supportiveness in this conversation suggests that alcohol exacerbated her symptoms in other exchanges.

Maternal Relationship

- June Was Emotionally Available & Supportive
 - This exchange demonstrates one of the last truly supportive and emotionally engaging moments between June and Jaden before her health declined further.
 - June acknowledged Jaden's struggles, offered encouragement, and reassured her.
- Jaden's Vulnerability & Need for Reassurance
 - Jaden's text at 6:03 PM explicitly expresses a deep emotional need for confirmation that June was "still in her corner."
 - The wording suggests that Jaden had been feeling confused and isolated as a result of some of the mixed messages she had received from June which left her feeling isolated and unsure of whether June still valued their relationship.
 - June's response was warm, reassuring, and reflective of the strong bond they had shared for decades.
- A Rare One-on-One Moment Without Lindsey's Presence
 - Jaden specifically asked to meet with June alone, without Lindsey, to share deeply personal matters.
 - This suggests that Lindsey's presence may have influenced or altered June's behavior, and facilitated in making Jaden feel unwelcome or unheard in other contexts.

Exclusion by Lindsey

- June and Jaden's Connection Was Strong When Lindsey Was Absent
 - This conversation shows no signs of tension, hostility, or misunderstanding.
 - This suggests that June's perception of Jaden was positive when Lindsey was not present or interfering.
 - This raises the possibility that Lindsey had been planting negative ideas about Jaden in June's mind, which would later manifest as hostility and confusion.

- Jaden's Deep Personal Confessions Were Shared with June, Not Lindsey
 - Jaden chose to confide in June about childhood trauma, estrangement from family, and her recent job loss.
 - Lindsey was deliberately excluded from this meeting, reinforcing the growing emotional distance between Lindsey and Jaden.
 - This highlights Lindsey's failure to act as a familial support system and raises further doubts about Lindsey's motivations.

Relevance to FTD and/or ARD

- Clear & Engaged Thinking in a Sober Setting
 - This interaction provides a rare glimpse of June at a time when neither alcohol nor dementia symptoms intruded on her typically loving and supportive relationship with Jaden.
- Fluctuating Symptoms & Cognitive Reserve
 - FTD often presents periods of relative clarity, followed by severe emotional dysregulation or executive dysfunction.

Additional Context Beyond the Text Message

- Jaden's Emotional Need for Support & Validation
 - Jaden's therapeutic progress and ongoing trauma recovery were key factors in why she reached out to June at this moment.
 - The significance of this meeting is rooted in Jaden's deep desire to affirm and solidify her connection with June to ensure their bond could remain intact despite the exposure of some of the darker aspects of the broader family system.
- Lindsey's Absence as a Key Factor in a Positive Interaction
 - June's warmth and support in this conversation further highlight the negative influence Lindsey likely had on June's perception of Jaden.
 - The fact that June displayed no hostility, paranoia, or confusion here suggests that her moments of aggression were linked to external manipulation, alcohol consumption, or cognitive decline.

Key Takeaway:

- June was fully present, engaged, and emotionally supportive when Lindsey was not involved in the conversation.
- Jaden's deep emotional need for reassurance highlights how strained their relationship had become in recent years.
- This conversation marks one of the final moments of genuine maternal connection between June and Jaden before the progressive effects of dementia, alcohol dependence, and external manipulation began to take an irreversible toll—not only on their relationship but on June's connections with those around her. As cognitive decline set in and alcohol further impaired her emotional regulation and judgment, June's ability to engage meaningfully with loved ones deteriorated. At the same time, Lindsey's increasing control over June's environment likely led to further isolation, distancing her from Jaden and potentially from other long-time friends and medical professionals who may have once been part of June's support system.

- Dementia Does Not Follow a Perfectly Linear Decline
 - June's cognitive abilities fluctuated, which is entirely normal in dementia. Some days, she may have seemed nearly like herself, while on others, her cognitive impairment was glaringly apparent.
 - These fluctuations do not mean she had the consistent mental clarity necessary to execute a valid will in 2021.
 - Courts and medical professionals expect "good days" to happen within the progression of dementia, but that does not negate the overall pattern of decline.
- June's Communication and Cognitive Abilities Were Already Failing in 2017
 - Despite some days of greater clarity, we already see in this February 28, 2017 text that June struggled with executive function, sentence structure, and emotional regulation.
 - This aligns with the early and middle stages of FTD and ARD dementia, where language processing begins to deteriorate before more severe symptoms emerge.
 - The garbled text, lack of punctuation, and inability to clarify "Easy Tiger" demonstrate a shift in her ability to organize and express thoughts clearly.
- A Single Day of Lucidity Does Not Indicate Full Mental Competency
 - It was fortunate that Jaden was able to experience a day of connection with June on December 28, 2017—a rare, pure moment of clarity in an otherwise declining trajectory.
 - However, this does not erase the increasing number of moments where June's cognitive impairment and emotional dysregulation were apparent.
 - By 2021, her condition had deteriorated far beyond what would be legally acceptable for signing high-stakes financial and legal documents.
- Lindsey Likely Took Advantage of Cognitive Fluctuations
 - Lindsey, who had control over June's daily life and affairs, was in the best position to recognize these cognitive fluctuations and use them to her advantage.
 - It is highly likely that Lindsey waited for a "good day" in 2021 to push through the fraudulent documents or pressured June in moments of confusion, ensuring that she signed without full comprehension.
 - This aligns with common patterns in elder abuse and undue influence cases, where exploiters capitalize on moments of perceived lucidity while ignoring the broader context of cognitive decline.
- Jaden's Petition to Contest the Probated Will of June Bloch s Based on Patterns Over Time, Known or Observable Fact, and Science, Not Isolated Moments or Emotional Charge
 - Jaden's case is not based on a single interaction, but on years of documented decline.

- The histories of communication spanning from 2014 to 2018, combined with medical history and other records, paint a clear picture of progressive deterioration.
- Even if June had coherent days in 2017, that does not mean she had the mental capacity required in 2021 to make legally binding decisions. In cases of FTD and ARD dementia, the rate of decline can vary, but individuals with a history of chronic alcohol use, autoimmune disorders, and impaired nutrient absorption—like June—are at an even higher risk for accelerated neurodegeneration. By 2001, June had already developed multiple advanced autoimmune conditions that compromised her body's ability to properly process nutrients and purge toxins, which would have only compounded the neurological damage caused by decades of alcohol consumption. Given her specific medical history and the progressive nature of her symptoms, a four-year window (from 2017 to 2021) would have provided ample time for her cognitive function to deteriorate significantly, leading to an irreversible loss of judgment, impulse control, and executive function necessary to execute complex legal and financial documents.
- The totality of evidence—including texts, medical history, and Lindsey's controlling behavior—demonstrates that June was highly vulnerable to manipulation by the time the fraudulent will and property transfers were executed.

May 02, 2018

Date: May 2, 2018

June's Age: 66 years old

Text from Jaden (Aligned to the Right):

"I lost my phone yesterday, sorry for not texting back. Just checking on you, miss you, and still trying to figure out why a Jaguar makes me think of you. Did you used to have one?"

"I did. But got divorced and Betty drove it. Ugh."

Text from Jaden (Aligned to the Right):

"Eww no she's not a Jag driver."

(Image or GIF appears in the conversation)

"I do miss you though. Remind me what you look like, I forgot?"

Analysis

Behavioral Indicators (Cognitive Decline & Social Withdrawal):

- June's Withdrawal from Regular Communication
 - Prior to 2018, June frequently initiated and equally participated in conversations with Jaden, actively inviting her to events, checking in, and maintaining ongoing dialogue.
 - In 2018, however, her communication with Jaden became notably infrequent, even though there had been no falling out or disruption to their relationship.
 - It is unclear whether this shift was due to June's declining health, increasing dependency on Lindsey and Jonathan who now lived in the house next to hers, or external influence discouraging her from socializing.
- The Dec. 28, 2017 Bonding Experience: A Contrast to June's Withdrawal in 2018
 - By all accounts, Jaden and June should have grown closer following their deeply personal conversation on December 28, 2017—an experience built on intimacy, vulnerability, and trust.
 - That day was a pivotal moment in their relationship, where Jaden opened up about long-held trauma and personal struggles, and June provided comfort and support.

- Unlike many previous interactions that involved social drinking or group settings, this meeting was private and deeply meaningful—occurring without the presence or influence of alcohol, Lindsey, or Jonathan.
 - Given this shared moment of closeness, June’s increasing withdrawal in 2018 is even more concerning, as it does not align with the natural trajectory of their bond.
 - Instead of continuing the strengthened relationship they had reaffirmed in December 2017, June’s communication slowed, and she became less engaged—suggesting cognitive and/or emotional decline.
- June’s Growing Dependence on Lindsey & Jonathan Could Have Played a Role
 - By this time, Lindsey and Jonathan lived next door to June and likely became the primary figures in her daily life.
 - Whether intentionally or as a byproduct of increasing dependence, this could have resulted in June becoming less engaged with others outside of her immediate living situation.
 - If Lindsey or Jonathan played a role in limiting June’s outside communication, it could have contributed to June’s withdrawal from Jaden, further isolating her and making her more susceptible to manipulation.
- Health-Related Factors That Could Have Led to Social Disengagement
 - June’s long standing autoimmune issues and history of alcohol use may have caused increased fatigue, cognitive sluggishness, or apathy, making socializing feel overwhelming or unnecessary.
 - If her cognitive symptoms were progressing, she may have unconsciously begun to withdraw from people she had once been close to as a way of coping with memory lapses or difficulty maintaining conversations.

Maternal Relationship:

- Jaden’s Reach Out Shows She Still Valued the Relationship
 - This conversation demonstrates that Jaden remained actively engaged in reaching out to June, disproving any later claims that Jaden distanced herself.
 - Despite her demanding work schedule and frequent travel, Jaden still checked in, showing that she wanted to maintain a connection.
- June Still Reciprocates, But With Less Enthusiasm Than in Prior Years
 - June does respond warmly, acknowledging Jaden’s message and reminiscing about past experiences.
 - However, compared to prior years, her messages are shorter and less engaging, lacking the depth of conversation she used to have.

Exclusion by Lindsey:

- June's Increasing Isolation Made It Easier for Lindsey to Control Her Narrative
 - By 2018, June was texting and calling Jaden less often, which may have allowed Lindsey to shape her perception of reality without external input from Jaden or other family members.
 - If Lindsey was influencing June's day-to-day interactions, she may have subtly discouraged June from reaching out to Jaden or framed Jaden's reduced contact (due to work obligations) as neglect.
 - This gradual isolation set the stage for June's eventual exclusion of Jaden from major decisions, including estate planning.

Relevance to FTD and/or ARD:

- Social Withdrawal as a Symptom of Cognitive Decline
 - A gradual disinterest in social engagement is common in FTD and ARD, as individuals struggle with mental fatigue, memory lapses, and emotional instability.
 - If June was experiencing executive dysfunction, she may have subconsciously started withdrawing from social relationships without fully understanding why.
- Reduced Effort in Communication
 - While June was still responsive, her texts lacked the proactive warmth and enthusiasm she had shown in earlier years.
 - This shift is subtle but significant, as it suggests cognitive fatigue, apathy, or increased reliance on in-person interactions with Lindsey and Jonathan.

Additional Context Beyond the Text Message:

- June's Gradual Withdrawal from Socializing
 - In previous years, June was proactive in reaching out, initiating conversations, and making plans with Jaden. However, by 2018, her engagement had noticeably declined.
 - This was not due to any rift or unresolved tension—Jaden had a demanding job that required travel, but their relationship remained positive.
 - What changed was June's own participation. Whether due to diminished health, cognitive fatigue, increased dependence on Lindsey and Jonathan, or external influences, she no longer made the same effort to maintain social connections.
 - This could be a sign of cognitive decline leading to social withdrawal, a common occurrence in dementia progression.
- Lindsey and Jonathan's Proximity and Possible Influence
 - By 2018, Lindsey and Jonathan were living next door to June, likely increasing June's dependence on them.
 - It is possible that June's increasing reliance on Lindsey and Jonathan led to fewer independent social interactions. If June was subtly influenced or discouraged from maintaining outside relationships, this could have contributed to her reduced contact with Jaden.

- June's world was shrinking, either by her own cognitive decline, increasing fatigue, or the influence of those around her.

- Declining Energy and Health Leading to Lethargy

- By this time, June had multiple chronic health conditions, all of which could have contributed to increased lethargy and reduced motivation to engage socially.
- This gradual social withdrawal could be a symptom of advancing dementia, as many individuals in cognitive decline begin isolating themselves, whether due to confusion, reduced emotional bandwidth, or simply losing the ability to keep up with past relationships.

Key Takeaway:

- June's reduced communication in 2018 was a notable shift from previous years, suggesting possible cognitive fatigue, social withdrawal, or external influences.
- Unlike in prior years, she was no longer as proactive in reaching out or making plans, despite Jaden's continued efforts to stay connected.
- The December 28, 2017 bonding experience should have strengthened their relationship, making June's withdrawal in 2018 highly unusual.
- Living next door to Lindsey and Jonathan may have deepened June's dependence on them, further limiting her outside interactions.
- June's world was becoming smaller—whether due to health issues, cognitive changes, or manipulation, she was not engaging as frequently, even with loved ones who had always been part of her life.

Comprehensive Analysis of November 5, 2018 Text Conversation

Date: November 5, 2018

June's Age: 67 years old

This analysis covers all three text exchanges from November 5, 2018, as part of a single overarching conversation centered around voting and election results. While the interaction remains lighthearted and playful, June's increasing impatience and demanding tone hint at underlying cognitive changes, particularly her inability to regulate urgency and control her reactions when awaiting a response.

Text Messages Overview

"Did you vote?"

Jaden (Aligned to the Right):

"I did!"

June (Aligned to the Left):

"We did too! Yeah for us"

"I'm assuming we voted for the same person?"

"Young handsome skinny"

"Oh no 🙄"

"Hurry answer me. 😬"

"Didn't mean that accident"

June (Aligned to the Left):

Jaden (Aligned to the Right):

"Trump you mean? Young handsome skinny"

Jaden (Aligned to the Right):

"Lol"

"Yes Beto of course"

June (Aligned to the Left):

"Thank you. I think he will win in Austin. Not sure about the rest of the state"

Jaden (Aligned to the Right):

"I'm dying for all of the results."

June (Aligned to the Left):

"Have a good night. I will be up tomorrow. Me too"

Jaden (Aligned to the Right):

"Night"

June (Aligned to the Left):

"Xxoo"

Analysis

Behavioral Indicators (Cognitive Decline & Emotional Dysregulation)

Impatience & Controlling Tone

- June's impatience in this exchange is a notable shift in tone from her historical communication patterns.
- Her demand for an immediate response ("Hurry answer me. 😬") feels abrupt, anxious, and controlling.
- She does not appear to recognize how inappropriate or excessive this demand is.
 - This lack of self-awareness regarding her own intensity is a hallmark of FTD, which affects impulse control and emotional regulation.

Failure to Self-Regulate & Appropriately Adjust Tone

- June quickly jumps from casual discussion to an urgent demand for validation of voting choices.
- Her reassurance-seeking behavior (e.g., needing confirmation that Jaden voted for the same candidate) shows difficulty handling uncertainty, a symptom associated with frontal lobe deterioration in FTD.
- Even after correcting her typo ("Didn't mean that accident"), she does not correct her overall demanding tone—another sign of executive dysfunction and impaired emotional regulation.

Political Discussion as a Social Anchor

- June had always enjoyed political discussions and, in the past, handled them in a measured way.

- In contrast, this conversation exhibits an uncharacteristic intensity, suggesting she is losing the ability to engage in complex conversations without emotional escalation.
- Her urgency for an answer could be a sign of cognitive inflexibility, where individuals with dementia struggle with waiting, processing delays, or conversations that do not immediately meet their expectations.

Maternal Relationship

Playful Banter & Retained Warmth

- Despite her impatience, June still shows affection and engages in playful banter with Jaden.
- The use of emojis and joking about Beto being "young, handsome, and skinny" is consistent with June's historical sense of humor, suggesting that not all aspects of her personality had eroded yet.
- However, the contrast between her playful start and demanding urgency reflects her diminishing ability to maintain social equilibrium.

Deteriorating Self-Awareness in Social Interactions

- June was always expressive, but her historical conversations with Jaden did not include this level of urgency or emotional pressure.
- Her inability to recognize that her tone is pushy or controlling is a significant change from prior interactions.
- This supports the broader pattern of decline in emotional regulation, a key component of FTD.

Exclusion by Lindsey

Reduced Communication & Dependency on Lindsey

- By 2018, June was fully dependent on Lindsey and Jonathan for daily affairs, meaning her exposure to outside perspectives—like Jaden's—was becoming more limited.
- Lindsey, who had clear motivations for isolating June, may have already reduced June's contact with Jaden significantly by this point.
- This conversation does not indicate hostility, but it does highlight a change in tone and control dynamics that align with Lindsey's increasing influence.

Shrinking Social Circle & Emotional Reliance on Jaden

- June's need for immediate validation from Jaden could also stem from an increasing sense of isolation as her outside social circle diminished.
- While she still sought comfort in Jaden's agreement, her tone suggests a heightened dependence on certainty and routine, which are common in individuals experiencing cognitive decline.

Relevance to FTD and/or ARD

- Loss of Emotional Self-Regulation

- FTD impacts the prefrontal cortex, leading to impulsivity, increased urgency, and diminished awareness of inappropriate behaviors.
- June's demanding tone here suggests an increasing inability to regulate emotions or process interactions at a normal pace.

- Reduced Patience & Cognitive Flexibility

- June's frustration at waiting for an answer and her inability to handle ambiguity in a conversation align with frontal lobe deterioration.
- Individuals with FTD often struggle with cognitive rigidity, meaning they become fixated on specific thoughts or expectations and have difficulty adapting when things do not go as planned.

- Contrasting Moments of Playfulness & Dysregulation

- FTD often presents in waves, with some moments appearing completely normal and others marked by emotional impulsivity or breakdowns in communication.
- This conversation is a transitional moment, where June is still humorous and engaged, but her difficulty in managing urgency and tone begins to surface more clearly.

Additional Context Beyond the Text Message

- The Last Playful Political Exchange

- This was one of the last lighthearted conversations between June and Jaden.
- By late November 2018, June's texts would become more aggressive, paranoid, and emotionally volatile.

- Social Withdrawal Was Likely Increasing

- June's social life outside of Lindsey and Jonathan had already shrunk considerably by 2018.
- This could have contributed to her need for immediate reassurance and her difficulty tolerating uncertainty.

- The First Sign of Jaden Feeling Emotionally Pressured in Conversation

- While Jaden does not explicitly push back in this exchange, June's controlling tone may have been one of the first moments where Jaden began to feel an imbalance in their dynamic.
- In prior years, June's affection never came with this kind of pressure or emotional demand.

Key Takeaway:

- June is still engaging in playful banter, but her increasing impatience and urgency suggest early cognitive rigidity.
 - The inability to regulate her tone and recognize how demanding she sounds is an emerging FTD symptom.
 - While humor is still present, the way she controls the conversation hints at a shifting social dynamic.
 - This marks the last politically charged yet good-natured conversations before June's emotional dysregulation became severe.
- By this point, social withdrawal and dependence on Lindsey had significantly altered her exposure to people outside of her immediate household.

Analysis of November 16, 2018 Messages

Behavioral Indicators (Cognitive Decline)

- No immediate signs of emotional dysregulation, paranoia, or hostility.
 - June's tone is warm and inviting, expressing a desire to include Jaden in the Thanksgiving gathering.
 - She extends the invitation and accepts Jaden's decline without pushback or manipulation.
 - There is no evidence of guilt-tripping, passive-aggressiveness, or resentment—issues that will surface in later messages.
- Preserved Emotional Regulation and Social Awareness
 - June acknowledges Jaden's response and wishes her a happy Thanksgiving.
 - She expresses no negative reaction or disappointment, demonstrating an ability to regulate her emotions and accept boundaries.

Maternal Relationship

- June Maintains an Affectionate and Supportive Tone
 - The invitation reflects a continued desire to include Jaden in family traditions.

- Her response of "Thanks. You too! Happy turkey day" is respectful, warm, and acknowledges Jaden's right to opt out without pressure.
- No Signs of Strained Relations or Alienation
 - This interaction shows that Jaden and June's relationship was still intact and functional at this time.
 - There is no hint of the hostility, resentment, or accusatory behavior that will emerge a few days later.

Exclusion by Lindsey

- A Shift is Coming: Lindsey's Influence Has Not Yet Manifested
 - There is no indication of cognitive dissonance in this moment of interaction that June believes Jaden is rejecting or abandoning the family.
 - This raises a red flag when considering how drastically her attitude will shift within days.
- Lindsey Likely Intervened Between November 16-22, 2018
 - Given June's peaceful and understanding response here, what caused her to believe, by November 22, that Jaden hated them and rejected the family?
 - Lindsey had at least six days to twist the narrative, misrepresent Jaden's absence, and condition June into believing falsehoods.

Relevance to FTD and ARD Dementia

- June's Emotional Stability at This Stage Highlights the Progression of Cognitive Decline
 - This interaction serves as a baseline to contrast against her future instability.
 - Dementia is not a linear decline—patients can have moments of clarity and normalcy before sudden drops into paranoia and irrationality.
 - Frontotemporal dementia and alcohol-related dementia are marked by extreme mood swings and emotional instability, which will be evident in the November 22-23 texts.

Additional Context Beyond the Text Message

- Significance of the Four Seasons Buffet and Family Traditions
 - Jaden loved the Four Seasons buffet and had attended this Thanksgiving tradition for years.

- Despite declining the invitation in 2018, there was no tension, hostility, or bad blood between June and Jaden at this moment.
 - This is critical because just days later, June would falsely believe that Jaden hated the buffet and despised their family—demonstrating how drastically her perception was altered.
- The Role of Lindsey and External Influence
 - Lindsey was uniquely positioned to manipulate June’s emotions and perceptions.
 - Lindsey had unrestricted access to June, controlled June’s mobility, and could continuously reinforce negative narratives.
 - This is an example of potential undue influence, which will be further examined in later messages.

Key Takeaways

- November 16, 2018 Serves as a “Before” Picture
 - June was stable, understanding, and emotionally regulated.
 - She accepted Jaden’s absence with grace and well-wishes.
 - There were no signs of resentment or estrangement at this time.
- Drastic Shift in June’s Attitude Over the Next Six Days
 - By November 22, 2018, June will be accusing Jaden of abandoning the family, hating them, and rejecting their traditions.
 - This marks the beginning of the most extreme cognitive and emotional dysregulation, captured in a preservable and shareable format (text messages), seen thus far.
- Lindsey’s Manipulation is the Most Likely Explanation for the Sudden Shift
 - Given the vast contrast between the November 16 and November 22 messages, something happened between these dates to radically alter June’s perception of Jaden.
 - Lindsey had direct access to June in the days leading up to Thanksgiving and could have easily planted false narratives to make June believe Jaden was intentionally rejecting the family.

Part 2: November 16-22, 2018 – The Turning Point & Cognitive Dissonance

November 16-22, 2018

Text Messages:

November 16, 2018 (Last Normal Interaction)

June (Aligned to the Left) from November 16, 2018:

"🍗🥗🥦🥩🦞🍰🍴🏈. We have reservation. Let us know if you will be joining us 🧑🧑🧑"

Jaden (Aligned to the Right) from November 16, 2018:

"I'll miss that buffet. You guys have fun."

June (Aligned to the Left) from November 16, 2018:

"Thanks. You too! Happy turkey day"

November 22, 2018 (Thanksgiving Day - Abrupt Shift in Tone)

June (Aligned to the Left):

"We had such a nice day. Hope you did too."

"Sorry you hate the buffet."

"Your loss."

"Not the food. But our small family."

"Your mom was rude to Lindsey."

"She's awful."

Jaden (Aligned to the Right):

"June, is everything OK? My mother aside, you don't sound ok."

June (Aligned to the Left):

"I'm fine. Hate your family politics."

Jaden (Aligned to the Right):

"I love that buffet, and my day was really good. I'm good today."

"Stay away from the people who make you feel that way. I don't want you to be near people that make you feel crappy."

"Me too. Had a great 'buffet.' Sorry you didn't want to be with us."

"Nite. Be well."

Analysis of November 16-22, 2018 Messages

Behavioral Indicators (Cognitive Decline)

- Drastic Emotional Reversal Without Apparent Trigger
 - On November 16, June was affectionate, accepting, and wished Jaden well.
 - By November 22, her tone had drastically shifted, accusing Jaden of "hating the buffet" and implying hostility where none existed.
 - This rapid emotional shift without provocation suggests external influence and/or cognitive impairment.
- Cognitive Dissonance and Emotional Manipulation
 - June previously acknowledged Jaden's love and appreciation for the Four Seasons buffet.
 - Despite this, she now acts as though Jaden's absence is due to resentment rather than a simple decision not to attend.
 - This kind of irrational contradiction suggests dementia-related cognitive rigidity, where the ability to process multiple perspectives diminishes.
- Fixation on Lindsey and Family Division
 - June suddenly brings up Jaden's mother being "awful" and rude to Lindsey—introducing family politics as a source of resentment.
 - This unprompted hostility signals an external influence reinforcing a divide between Jaden and June—likely Lindsey.

Maternal Relationship

- From Understanding to Accusatory
 - June initially accepted Jaden's decision with warmth but then reframed it as abandonment and disdain for the family.
 - This contradicts her previous messages and shows how external narratives (likely Lindsey's) altered June's perception of Jaden.
- Failure to Recognize Her Own Emotional Manipulation
 - June's texts frame Jaden's decision as an act of rejection rather than personal preference.
 - The inability to recognize how accusatory and emotionally charged her words are demonstrates a lack of self-awareness, consistent with FTD and ARD dementia symptoms.

Exclusion by Lindsey

- Lindsey's Apparent Role in the Narrative Shift
 - Between November 16 and November 22, something or someone caused June to completely change her perception of Jaden.
 - Given Lindsey's history of isolating June, it is highly probable that Lindsey painted Jaden's absence as a personal attack, reinforcing June's growing paranoia and emotional instability.
- June's Sudden Need to Align with Lindsey's Perspective
 - "Your mom was rude to Lindsey. She's awful." → This statement comes out of nowhere, indicating that June had been primed to be resentful toward Jaden's side of the family.
 - June's defensiveness and emphasis on division suggest that Lindsey was feeding her false or exaggerated narratives about Jaden.

Relevance to FTD and ARD Dementia

- Emotional Dysregulation and Paranoia
 - June's need for reassurance quickly turned into a sense of betrayal and resentment—a pattern seen in dementia-related emotional instability.
 - She fixated on one perceived slight and magnified it far beyond what was rational.
- Increasing Susceptibility to Manipulation
 - June no longer had the cognitive flexibility to balance multiple perspectives—she could only accept one narrative at a time.
 - This made her increasingly vulnerable to Lindsey's influence and re-writing of reality.

Additional Context Beyond the Text Message

- Lindsey's Influence During the Days Between These Messages
 - Jaden and June had no conflicts or harsh exchanges between November 16 and November 22.
 - The only plausible explanation for June's sudden hostility is that Lindsey was feeding her false information about Jaden's intentions.
- June's Dependence on Lindsey Was Already Deeply Established
 - By this time, June's world was incredibly small, consisting almost exclusively of:
 - Her home.

- Her job as a high school librarian.
 - Her cat.
 - Lindsey and Jonathan.
- Jaden was the only person outside of Lindsey's control who had access to June, making her a direct threat to Lindsey's unchecked influence.

Key Takeaways

- November 16, 2018, Was the Last Lucid and Rational Exchange Between June and Jaden
 - June was still capable of warmth and acceptance.
 - This is crucial for showing the contrast between her normal state and the later dementia-driven paranoia and hostility.
- November 22, 2018, Marked a Clear Manipulation-Induced Shift
 - June went from being understanding to making irrational accusations.
 - This supports the argument that Lindsey was actively working to turn June against Jaden.
- Cognitive Dissonance and Emotional Instability Became More Pronounced
 - June was struggling to reconcile her love for Jaden with the false narratives being fed to her.
 - This conflict led to escalating paranoia, irrational resentment, and emotional breakdowns.

Part 3: November 22-28, 2018 – Emotional Breakdown, Guilt, and Isolation

June (Aligned to the Left):

"Nite. Be well."

Jaden (Aligned to the Right):

"I love you June."

June (Aligned to the Left):

"I know you do. But you have many issues. I can't help. But I love you and am available"

"Even Jon said he missed you today"

"Why can't you be with us. Crazy"

"Sad that you don't want us. I guess it's your loss. We are good people"

(Later on that day)

"We miss you. Sorry you don't like us"

"Fxxx you are missing so much."

"Fxxx you are missing so much."

"Hope you have someone that loves you more than us. You make me crazy. Love you"

"We are doing Christmas at L&J. Pierogi and filets. You are invited. Not much going on for Hanukkah, Jon will be in Israel. He leaves Monday. Let us know"

"Hello"

"Well let us know about Christmas. What food do you like or not. I think pierogis and filets sound amazing. Your loss. Be well"

"F. Just answer out of respect"

June (Aligned to the Left):

"F. Just answer out of respect"

"So disrespectful. Sad. Love you. Sorry for your frame of mind"

"You are so disrespectful. Sad. I hope you are ok. Love you. Even tho you make it so hard. I guess stay away from us until you are respectful. Sorry. I love you. You make it so hard. I guess you want to be distant from us. I'm not a Bloch"

"I won't contact you again ever. Be well. I love you but I'm not a therapist. Be well"

"F you. We love you. Bye"

"I won't come to you anymore. You are loved and welcome to come to me. I hope I have never hurt or crossed you. I walk gently around you because you are so fragile and volatile Be well and be happy. Love you"

June (Aligned to the Left):

"happy. Love you"

"Good night. And be well. Love you"

"My family keeps getting smaller. Is it me?"

June (Aligned to the Left):

"I said I wouldn't come to you anymore. I regret that. Call me if you need me/us. Lindsey and Jon love you too. (Especially Jon). He loves your conversation. Please don't stay away. Jon got a new job editing one of many tv shows. Ripley's Believe It or Not. You can give home a shout out"

"Give him a shout out. So happy for him"

"Hope I hear from you. Xo"

"Don't be stubborn. Love you"

"Tell Jon congrats if that's all you can do. He likes you so much"

June (Aligned to the Left):

"Tell Jon congrats if that's all you can do. He likes you so much"

"K my last text"

"O did I mention he goes to Israel tomorrow"

"Night"

June (Aligned to the Left):

This message contains a GIF or image of a cartoon caricature that looks like June drawing a heart in the air with her left pointer finger.

Analysis

Behavioral Indicators (Cognitive Decline & Emotional Dysregulation)

Escalating Emotional Volatility & Manipulation

- Rapid emotional shifts:
 - June goes from expressing love and concern to hurling accusations, guilt-tripping, and verbally lashing out.
 - The drastic swings between affection ("Love you") and aggression ("Fxxx you") are indicative of Frontotemporal Dementia (FTD) and Alcohol-Related Dementia (ARD), both of which impair emotional regulation.
- Cognitive Rigidity & Fixation on Rejection
 - June is unable to process alternative explanations for Jaden's absence—interpreting it only as rejection.
 - Her fixation on "why can't you be with us" and "Sad that you don't want us" suggests paranoia and cognitive rigidity, both common in dementia.

Delusional Thinking & Paranoia

- "My family keeps getting smaller. Is it me?"
 - June begins doubting her own reality, suggesting a moment of cognitive dissonance.
 - The question itself suggests paranoia—as if she's sensing that something is wrong, yet unable to logically process what is happening to her due to cognitive impairment.
- False Narratives Reinforced by Lindsey
 - June adopts a narrative that Jaden hates her, despite years of evidence to the contrary.
 - This is not a logical conclusion but one fed to her by Lindsey—a clear sign of undue influence and manipulation.

Maternal Relationship & Emotional Manipulation

"Jon Likes You" vs. Lindsey's Absence

- June repeatedly emphasizes Jon's affection for Jaden, but never mentions Lindsey missing her.
- This suggests that Lindsey was actively working to separate June and Jaden while using Jon as a buffer to maintain some connection.

Weaponizing Love & Guilt

- June says, "Hope you have someone that loves you more than us."
- This is a classic guilt tactic, implying that Jaden has abandoned a loving family.

- The verbal attacks ("Fxxx you") followed by "Love you" create an emotional rollercoaster, a common manipulation pattern in dementia-related behavior.

Exclusion by Lindsey & Reinforcement of Isolation

Lindsey's Role in Creating the "Villain" Narrative

- June's perception of Jaden changed dramatically between November 16-22, 2018.
- This suggests Lindsey was actively feeding June false information, reinforcing the belief that Jaden was:
 - Disrespectful
 - Emotionally detached
 - Uncaring
 - Volatile

Lindsey & Jonathan as June's Gatekeepers

- By 2018, June's entire social and physical mobility was controlled by Lindsey and Jonathan.
- June's fear and dependency were absolute, making her completely vulnerable to their influence.

Relevance to FTD and/or ARD

- Hallmark signs of dementia-driven paranoia and delusions
- Breakdown of emotional regulation and impulse control
- Manipulation made easy by June's declining cognitive flexibility

Additional Context Beyond the Text Messages

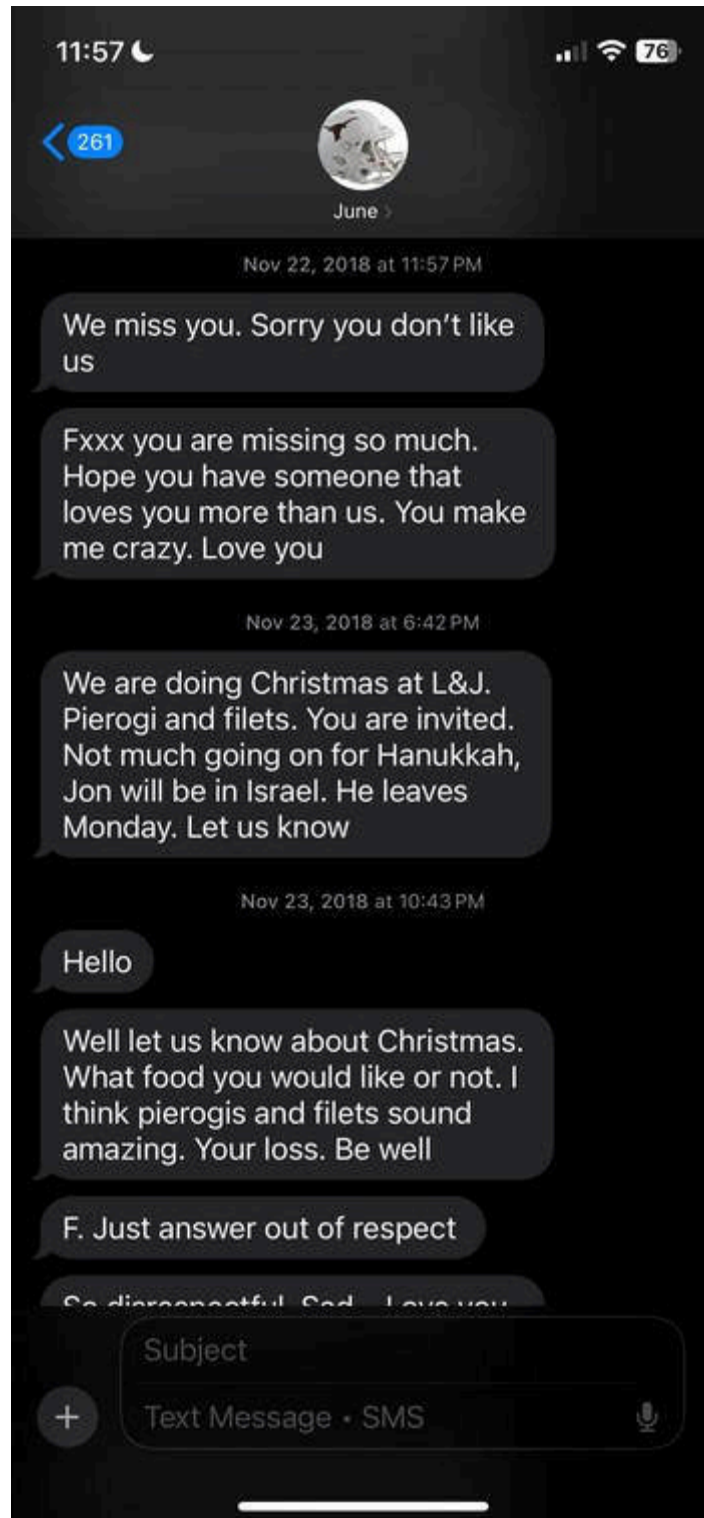

Cognitive Dissonance: Struggling to Reconcile Conflicting Realities

- June is caught between two opposing realities:
 1. The Jaden she knew—loving, consistent, family-oriented.
 2. The Jaden Lindsey portrayed—distant, disrespectful, uncaring.
- June's dementia made her unable to reconcile these two realities, forcing her into cognitive dissonance, which Lindsey expertly exploited.

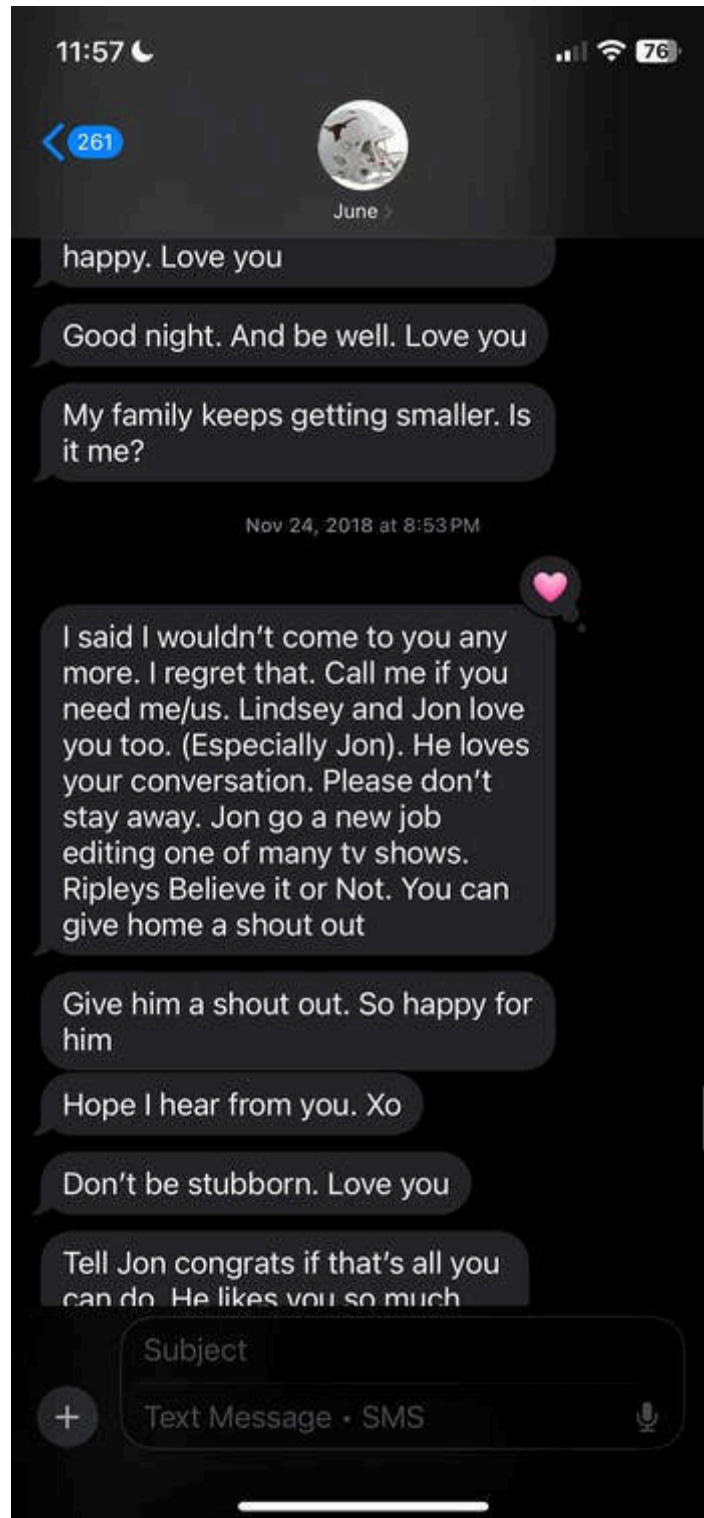

Key Takeaway

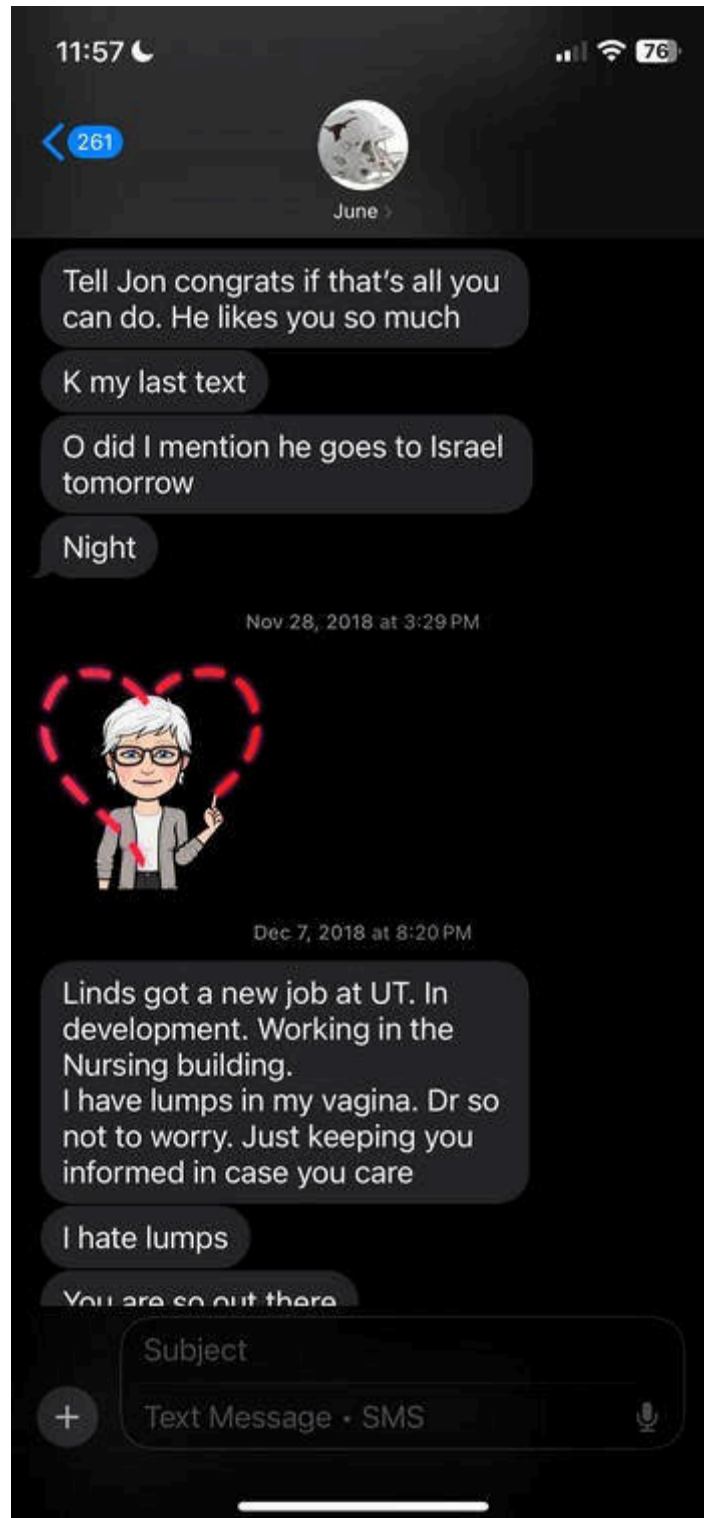

- By November 24, 2018, June's perception of Jaden had been entirely rewritten by Lindsey.
- June was displaying classic dementia-driven paranoia, cognitive rigidity, and emotional dysregulation, making her highly vulnerable to undue influence.
- Lindsey isolated June from the only other person who could have intervened, ensuring total control over June's financial and legal decisions in the years to come.

Comprehensive Analysis of December 07-08, 2018 Communications

Date: December 7-8, 2018

June's Age: 67 years old

December 7-8, 2018 – The Final Breakdown & Total Isolation

This analysis will cover June's final text interactions with Jaden, culminating in a complete emotional and cognitive collapse on December 7-8, 2018.

Following the ending of June and Jaden communication by text, they continued to talk occasionally throughout 2019 over the phone.

Text Messages Overview

June (Aligned to the Left):

"I hate lumps"

"You are so out there"

"Oh Jon is back home from Israel... like you care. Hope you are having an ok life"

"I hope you don't have lumps anywhere. Not very comfortable"

"Talk next year"

"Lumps in my vagina"

"O. You don't care. Is this still your mail connection. I don't want to be talking to air... just air that couldn't care shit about us"

"I guess it's not your address anymore. Where can I get in touch with you if my lumps turn into cancer. Oh. I guess you don't care"

"You are a mess. Glad I didn't contribute. I love you and tried to let you know that."

"You may be dead for all I know. Pray to those above. Not true"

"I guess I'll stop worrying/thinking about you. If I don't hear from you by noon tomorrow, I am done. Your choice. I have been reaching out forever. You are the biggest loser. I have Lindsey and Jonathan—you have whatever"

"Xxxx you"

"Oh lumps in my vagina. Sad you don't care. Bye Adrienne. Your loss is great. Sad you are a big mess"

"Hope you are alive... or not if you are so messed up"

"Fuck. If I don't hear from you I guess I'll call police and get them to check on you in the morning."

"Send EMS to check on you in the morning"

"Expect sirens"
"I'm sobbing. Not joking"
"Just answer"
"What's the big deal. I'm crying here"
"Are you drugged up"
"Don't care"
"Let me know you are alive"
"Hello. Hello hello hello hello"
"I guess I need to call Gail. Fuck. Fuck. Fuck"
"You suck. Making me call Gail"
"Who the hell cares—you hate me. Because I'm Catholic. Because I have a great daughter. Because I have a great son-in-law. Because I have a good job. Because I have a nice house. Because I have a great cat. I've worked fucking hard for all this. Just answer that you are not dead. You can xxxx me out of your life. Just let me know you are alive. Don't be an ass like your mom."
"You are so mean"
"We know your phone is charging"
"Adrienne. Alex. A. Jaden. Who is fucked up. Not me."
"I'm going to get help in the morning. Linds and Jon will be in Houston. I'll go to the Fire Dept there on Steck. We will be knocking on your door. Sucks for you. Hope you don't have anything like drugs in there."
"But no. I will not be sucked back into the Bloch women. Are they putting you up to this?"
"I'm coming to 3080 Spicewood Springs Rd"
"In the morning. If you don't care. I'm not risking my life tonight"
"Just tell me you are ok."

December 08, 2018

"Hello. Are you there"
"Coming in the morning. You better have a good story"
"I've been up all night worrying about you. What's your problem?"
"Hello"
"Hello"
"Hello"
"Answer"

"You are off my phone. Sorry you are so hateful. I've removed you from all my contacts. Be well."

Analysis

Behavioral Indicators (Cognitive Decline & Emotional Dysregulation)

Extreme Emotional Instability & Breakdown

- June spirals into total emotional chaos, alternating between:
 - Guilt-tripping ("Sad you don't care.")
 - Rage ("Xxxx you")
 - Paranoia ("Are they putting you up to this?")
 - Desperation ("I'm sobbing. Not joking.")
 - Threats ("I guess I need to call Gail.")
 - Delusional accusations ("Are you drugged up?")

This erratic behavior is consistent with dementia-related cognitive dissonance, where a person struggles to process reality in a stable way.

- Lack of Emotional Regulation
 - June cycles through anger, grief, and paranoia within minutes.
 - This emotional lability (rapid mood swings) is a known symptom of Frontotemporal Dementia (FTD) and Alcohol-Related Dementia (ARD).

Maternal Relationship & Emotional Manipulation

Weaponizing Fear & Guilt

- June creates a life-or-death scenario where Jaden's failure to respond means she is dead.
- She then shifts to blaming Jaden, calling her a "loser," "a mess," and "so mean."
- This is not rational behavior—it is emotional blackmail driven by cognitive impairment.

June's Fixation on Lindsey & Jonathan

- Despite her rage toward Jaden, she glorifies Lindsey and Jonathan, reinforcing their role as her primary influencers and gatekeepers.
- This further proves Lindsey's isolation tactics were working, solidifying Jaden as an "outsider" in June's distorted perception of reality.

Exclusion by Lindsey & Reinforcement of Isolation

Lindsey's Direct Role in June's Breakdown

- Lindsey texted and called Jaden on December 7, 2018—yet deliberately chose not to inform June that Jaden was fine.
- Instead, Lindsey let June spiral into full-blown panic, further entrenching her belief that Jaden was hateful and neglectful.
- This proves a deliberate act of psychological manipulation on Lindsey's part.

June's Absolute Dependence on Lindsey

- June believed that traveling 3.2 miles to Jaden's home was "risking her life."
- This demonstrates total social and physical isolation, a hallmark of elder abuse and undue influence.

Relevance to FTD and/or ARD

- June's paranoia, delusions, and disorganized thought patterns match advanced-stage dementia symptoms.
- Her complete cognitive dependence on Lindsey & Jonathan made her highly susceptible to manipulation.
- This reinforces the argument that by 2021, she had no capacity to execute valid legal documents.

Additional Context Beyond the Text Messages

Cognitive Dissonance & The Collapse of June's Perception of Reality

- June had two conflicting realities:
 - Jaden as she knew her—loving, reliable, family-oriented.
 - The false narrative Lindsey fed her—Jaden as uncaring, distant, and possibly a drug addict.
- June's declining cognitive function made her unable to reconcile these two realities, leading to panic and emotional implosion.

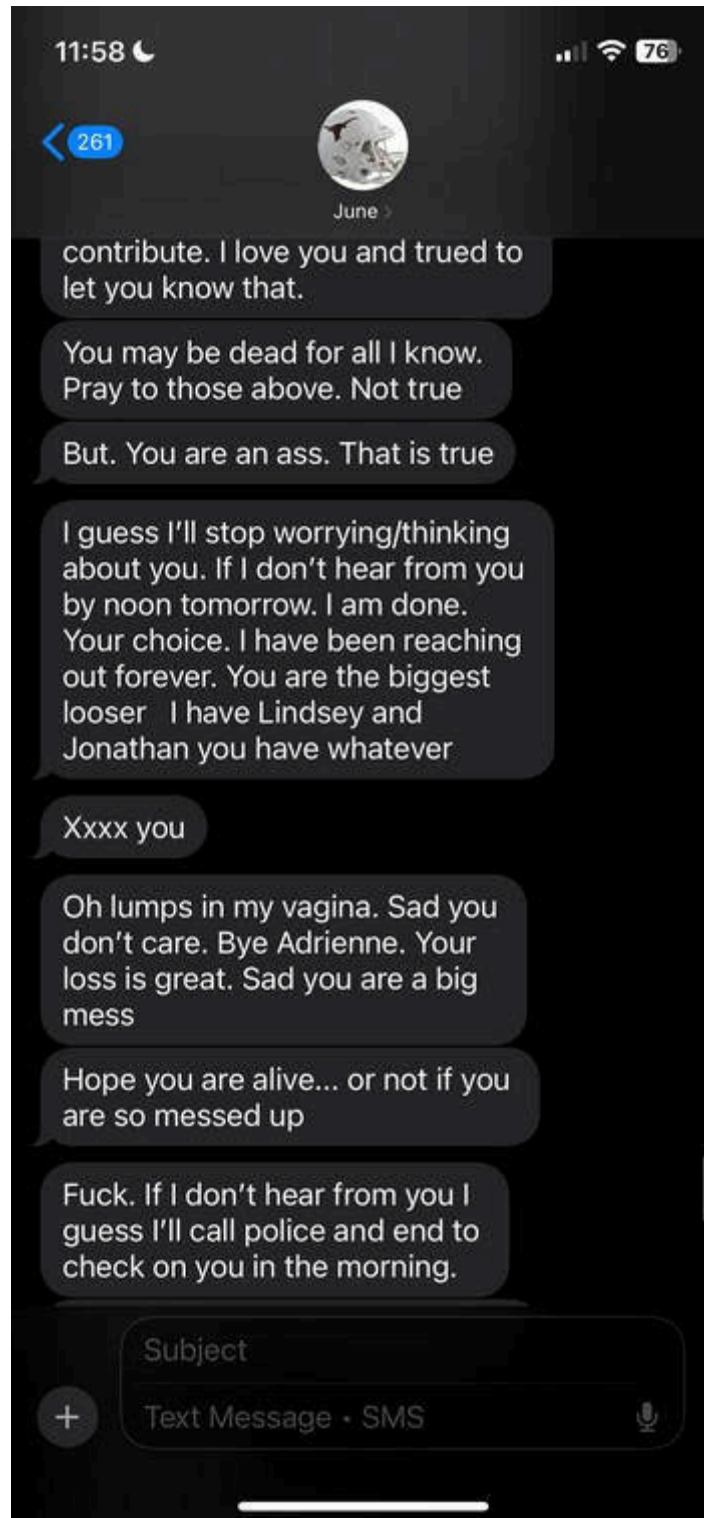

The Final Break in June & Jaden's Relationship

- After years of a strong maternal bond, this exchange marks the end of June and Jaden's meaningful connection.
- From December 8, 2018, onward, June was entirely under Lindsey's control.

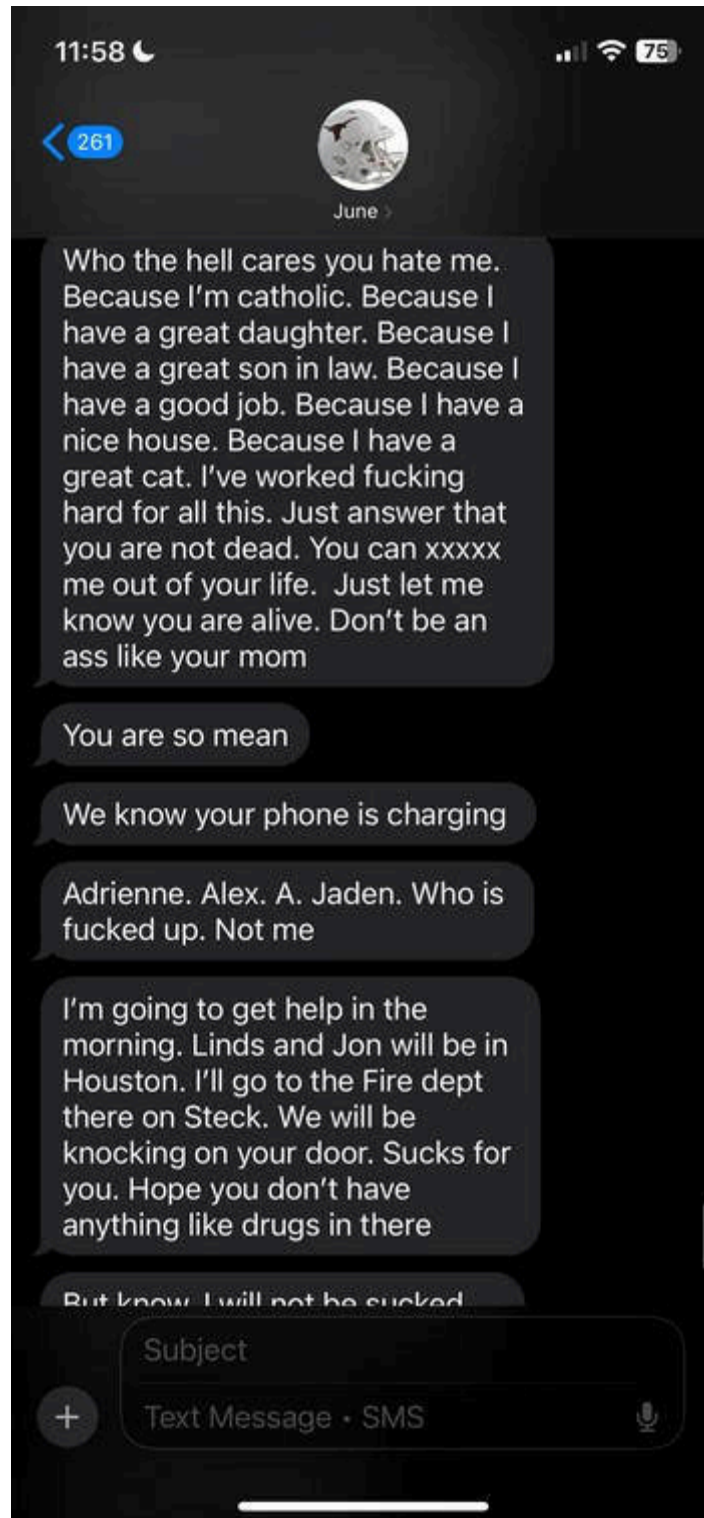

Key Takeaway

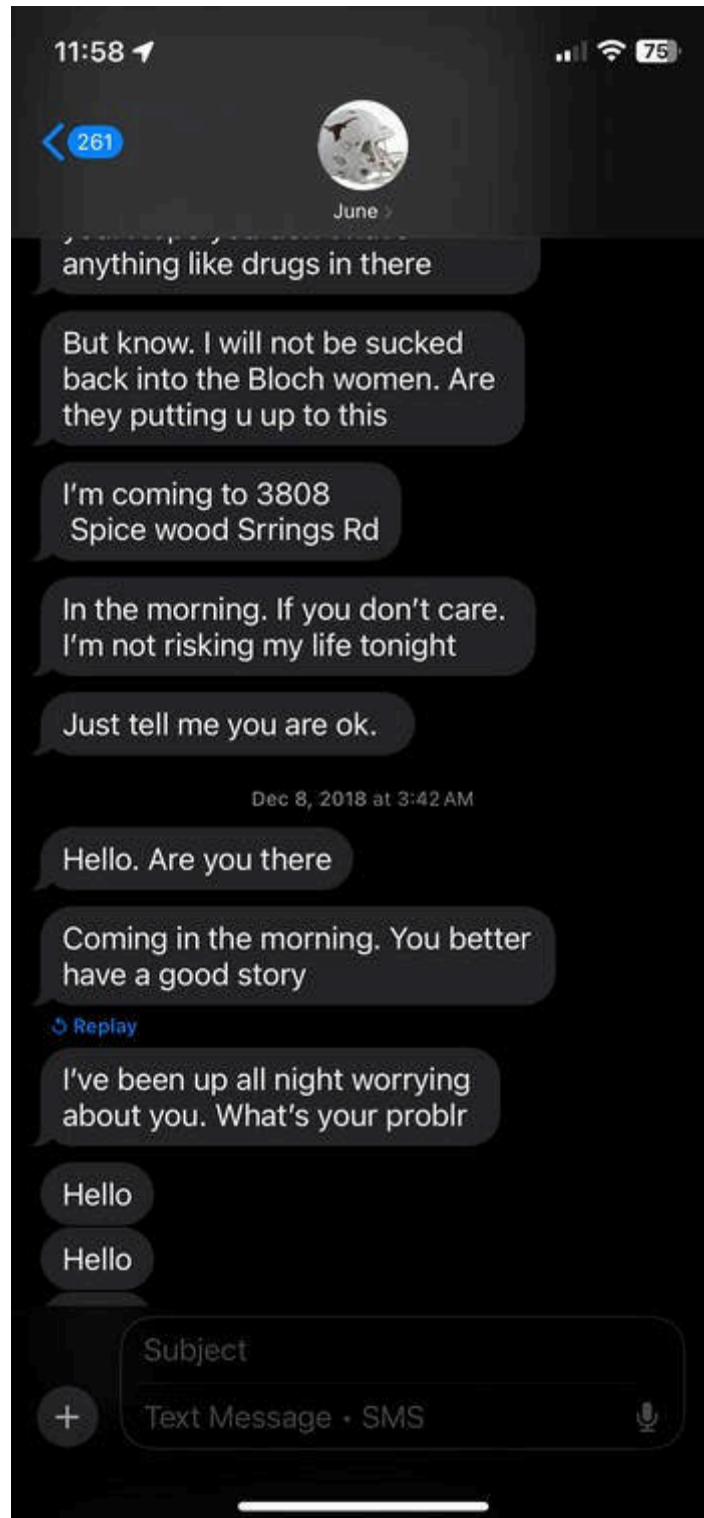

- This is the turning point. Lindsey orchestrated June's emotional and cognitive breakdown, ensuring that Jaden was permanently tainted in June's eyes.
- By 2021, June's isolation was absolute, making it easy for Lindsey to execute the fraudulent will and real estate transfers.
- This text exchange is undeniable evidence of undue influence, elder abuse, and testamentary incapacity.

Final Context & Closing Statement on June and Jaden's Communication

Overview of the Relationship's Final Years

Despite the intense emotional distress caused by June's cognitive decline and Lindsey's manipulations, June and Jaden's bond persisted beyond the final text exchange on December 8, 2018. While their text communications ceased entirely after this point, Jaden and June continued to speak by phone throughout 2019—evidence of which can be found in EXHIBIT F, Jaden's communications with Lindsey.

During these phone conversations, June exhibited the same paranoia, emotional dysregulation, and hostility that had become apparent in her text messages from November-December 2018. Notably, on November 4, 2019, June called Jaden on her birthday. The conversation began pleasantly but rapidly escalated into verbal hostility and emotional volatility—mirroring the patterns seen in the previous year's text messages.

Jaden, who was in Orlando, Florida, attending a Microsoft Ignite conference, was blindsided by June's accusations and abrupt emotional shift. June, despite having no prior conflict with Jaden, suddenly became convinced that Jaden no longer loved or wanted anything to do with her. This behavior was entirely unprovoked and unexplained, reinforcing that June's cognitive decline had further progressed in the year following their last text messages.

Lindsey's Confirmation of June's Mental Decline in 2019 & 2020

After this distressing phone call, Jaden immediately reached out to Lindsey for clarity. Lindsey's response was not one of surprise or concern—instead, she casually admitted that June had been behaving this way for years, stating:

"She goes crazy every once in a while, but goes back to normal. Ha!" -Lindsey Bloch

This statement is critical because it confirms that:

1. Lindsey was fully aware of June's erratic and declining mental state.
2. June had been behaving in this unstable manner for years, not just toward Jaden but also toward Lindsey.
3. Rather than addressing her mother's decline, Lindsey dismissed and ignored it.

Despite knowing that June's cognitive abilities were deteriorating, Lindsey took no steps to ensure that her mother was protected or receiving appropriate medical care. Instead, she continued to manipulate June, exploiting her cognitive decline to gain full control over June's finances and estate in 2021.

Lindsey's Progression from Psychological Manipulation to Legal Fraud

Lindsey Bloch's actions over the years showcase a calculated progression from subtle psychological manipulation to full-scale legal fraud. By analyzing Lindsey's words, behaviors, and omissions—alongside her mother's deteriorating mental state—it becomes evident that her primary goal was to eliminate any potential obstacles standing between herself and the full inheritance of June Bloch's estate. The following timeline highlights key moments in her systematic exploitation of her mother and the intentional isolation of Jaden Riley.

2018 – The Year of Emotional Isolation & Manipulation

- November 16, 2018:
 - June directly invites Jaden to the Four Seasons Thanksgiving buffet. Jaden politely declines, and June gracefully accepts the decision, wishing Jaden a happy holiday.
 - This interaction proves that before Lindsey's intervention, June showed no animosity toward Jaden regarding her choice not to attend Thanksgiving.
- November 22, 2018 – Thanksgiving Day:
 - After spending time with Lindsey, June's attitude toward Jaden shifts drastically. She falsely accuses Jaden of hating the family, claims she hates the buffet (which Jaden loved), and expresses deep resentment.
 - Lindsey had multiple days to manipulate June's emotions between November 16 and 22, likely painting Jaden as uncaring or dismissive.
- December 7-8, 2018 – Lindsey Withholds Critical Information:
 - June spirals into a paranoid and emotionally unstable state, believing Jaden is dead or deliberately ignoring her.
 - Jaden had already explained her intense work schedule and travel logistics to Lindsey, yet Lindsey never passed this information to June.
 - Lindsey's inaction allowed her mother to experience extreme psychological distress, pushing her further into cognitive decline while reinforcing the false belief that Jaden was unreliable.
 - June's isolation was so severe that she believed driving 3.2 miles to check on Jaden would be "risking her life," proving she had no independence left.

2019 – Lindsey Admits June's Decline Yet Does Nothing

- November 2019:
 - June and Jaden have a phone conversation where June exhibits the same erratic and paranoid behavior seen in her 2018 text messages.
 - Jaden, deeply concerned, contacts Lindsey for support. Lindsey acknowledges that her mother has been acting this way for years but expresses no concern.
 - Lindsey has known for years that June was cognitively impaired and emotionally unstable yet took no steps to seek medical intervention or inform other family members.
- January 10, 2020:

- Lindsey once again acknowledges her mother's unstable mental state but dismisses it, saying, "She goes crazy every once in a while, but then goes back to normal."
- This statement is critical—it proves that Lindsey knew her mother was fluctuating between lucidity and severe cognitive impairment, making her highly susceptible to undue influence.

2020 – The COVID Pandemic: The Perfect Isolation Tactic

- March 2020:
 - COVID-19 lockdowns begin, providing Lindsey with the perfect opportunity to further isolate June.
 - Jaden, unaware of the extent of June's decline, is completely shut out while Lindsey maintains control over every aspect of June's life.
 - This period eliminates the possibility of any external influence from other friends, family, or professionals who could have intervened in June's care or estate planning.

2021 – The Transition from Manipulation to Legal Fraud

- June 2021 – The Fraud Begins:
 - Lindsey and Darri Cross, a Notary Public and Legal Assistant to Attorney Rick M. Albers of Kuperman, Orr & Albers, P.C., execute a fraudulent Special Warranty Deed, transferring 100% ownership of June's property at 5704 Trailridge Dr., Austin, TX—a home worth nearly $1 million—to Lindsey.
 - December 2021: Lindsey adds her husband, Jonathan, as a 50% owner of the property.
 - 2021 Loan Transaction: Lindsey and Jonathan use the fraudulently obtained home as collateral to secure a $498,000 loan.
- September 15, 2021 – The Suspicious New Will Appears:
 - With the assistance of Osborne, Helman, Scott, Knisely & Stanton, LLP, Lindsey orchestrates the execution of an entirely new will that removes all prior beneficiaries and names herself as the sole inheritor of June Bloch's estate.
 - The will is highly generic and does not reflect the level of estate planning typically associated with a person of June's financial standing.
 - The document was notarized by Lois Stanton, a partner at Osborne, Helman, Scott, Knisely & Stanton, LLP—the same law firm that would later represent Lindsey in probate court.
 - The two witnesses, Tyler R. Hannusch (an attorney at the same law firm) and Frank Schiller (a floor manager with direct ties to the firm), raise serious concerns about conflicts of interest.
 - There is no substantive proof that June personally appeared before the notary and witnesses as required by law. The structure of the document (staple indentations, formatting, and lack of verification methods like video or photographic proof) suggests that the will could have been signed at different times or even fabricated entirely.

- This follows a pattern of other fraudulent estate actions, including the illegal property transfer under the Special Warranty Deed executed just three months earlier in June 2021.
 - The firm overseeing the probate proceedings actively concealed key details and did not provide any external verification of the will's legitimacy, further supporting claims of elder exploitation, undue influence, and financial abuse.
- December 2021:
 - Lindsey adds her husband, Jonathan, as a 50% owner of the fraudulently acquired property to use his stable work history, credit score, and higher job income to qualify for a nearly half-million dollar loan using the illegally acquired property as collateral.
 - 2021 Loan Transaction:
 - Lindsey and Jonathan use the fraudulently obtained home as collateral to secure a $498,000 loan.

Key Takeaways for the Court

- By November 2019, June's cognitive decline was undeniable.
 - She displayed the same irrational, paranoid, and hostile behavior that had been present in her November-December 2018 texts.
 - Lindsey admitted to Jaden that this was a recurring pattern in June's behavior.
- Despite her awareness of June's condition, Lindsey took no steps to protect her mother.
 - Instead, she used June's isolation, paranoia, and dependence to further manipulate her.
- Lindsey's fraudulent actions in 2021 were not a sudden opportunistic event but a well-orchestrated scheme.
 - Lindsey's strategy involved first isolating June from Jaden, then ensuring that June's perception of reality was completely controlled by her.
 - Lindsey actively withheld information from June to worsen her paranoia and instability.
 - Lindsey admitted to Jaden multiple times that June was cognitively declining but did nothing to protect her.
 - The COVID pandemic provided Lindsey with the perfect opportunity to completely isolate June from outside intervention.

- Lindsey did not seek medical care, cognitive evaluations, or legal protections for her mother—instead, she used her decline as an opportunity for financial gain.
- By 2021, Lindsey had full control over June’s reality and used this control to forge real estate documents and a will that exclusively benefited herself.
- By 2021, June was entirely incapable of executing a valid will or legal transactions.
 - Her cognitive decline was well established for years.
 - Lindsey’s manipulation and control ensured that June had no true independent agency in financial or legal matters.

Final Statement for the Court

The combination of EXHIBIT A (Forgery), EXHIBIT B (History of Declining Health), EXHIBIT E (June’s Text Messages), EXHIBIT F (Jaden’s Communications with Lindsey), EXHIBIT G (Proof of June’s Fear, Dependence, and Limitation), and the other documentation presented to the court alongside Jaden Riley’s petition to contest the probate will of June Bloch provides overwhelming evidence of elder abuse, undue influence, and testamentary incapacity. By 2019, June was already completely compromised mentally and emotionally, making it impossible for her to execute a valid will or transfer property in 2021.

Lindsey knew this—and exploited it to her full advantage, fabricating legal documents and securing fraudulent property transfers.

This case demands that the fraudulent 2021 will and real estate transfers be fully invalidated due to:

- Lack of testamentary capacity.
- Undue influence and elder exploitation.
- Deliberate deception, emotional abuse, and isolation tactics used by Lindsey Bloch.

Lindsey’s actions are textbook elder abuse and financial exploitation, and this court must act to reverse the fraudulent transactions and restore justice.

The September 15, 2021, will is a textbook example of estate fraud, executed at a time when June Bloch was clearly incapacitated, entirely dependent on Lindsey, and highly susceptible to manipulation. Its creation and notarization by individuals with a vested financial interest in Lindsey’s legal success further solidify its invalidity and the necessity of court intervention.

Had Osborne, Helman, Scott, Knisely & Stanton, LLP operated with integrity and genuinely sought to serve the best interests of their supposed client, June Bloch (had she been competent), rather than prioritizing the firm’s financial gain, they would have recommended a pour-over will and living trust—a standard estate planning strategy that would have better protected June’s assets and ensured her true wishes were followed. Instead, they facilitated the execution of a highly generic and suspiciously basic will, which served no legitimate estate-planning purpose other than guaranteeing costly probate fees that would directly benefit their law firm. The firm's deliberate failure to provide competent estate planning guidance—while simultaneously profiting from an entirely avoidable probate process—further underscores the fraudulent nature of the document, the questionable integrity of Osborne, Helman, Scott, Knisely & Stanton, LLP, and the necessity of court intervention to invalidate it.

Restatement:

Age of Onset for FTD, ARD, and WKS

1. Frontotemporal Dementia (FTD)

- Typical Age of Onset: 40–65 years old
- Can Occur As Early As: Late 20s–30s (rare)
- Peak Onset: 50s–60s
- Progression: 6–10 years from diagnosis to death
- Key Factors Influencing Onset: Genetics (familial FTD cases), environmental/lifestyle factors

2. Alcohol-Related Dementia (ARD) / Alcohol-Related Brain Damage (ARBD)

- Typical Age of Onset: 40s–60s
- Can Occur As Early As: 30s (for chronic heavy drinkers)
- Peak Onset: 50s–60s
- Progression: Variable; may stabilize or even improve if alcohol consumption stops early enough
- Key Factors Influencing Onset: Duration and severity of alcohol consumption, nutritional deficiencies (especially thiamine/B1), liver damage

3. Wernicke-Korsakoff Syndrome (WKS)

- Typical Age of Onset: 45–65 years old
- Can Occur As Early As: 30s (in severe alcoholics or individuals with extreme malnutrition)
- Peak Onset: 50s–60s
- Progression: Rapid if untreated (Wernicke's Encephalopathy can develop into permanent Korsakoff's Syndrome within weeks to months)
- Key Factors Influencing Onset: Severe and prolonged thiamine (vitamin B1) deficiency, often due to alcoholism, malabsorption, or malnutrition

The Dementias of FTD, ARD, and WKS in June Bloch's Case

- June was 66–70 years old between 2017 and 2021, well within the common age range for symptomatic FTD, ARD, and WKS.
- Her history of chronic alcohol consumption, autoimmune disease, and likely nutritional deficiencies would greatly increase her risk of developing ARD and WKS, with FTD also remaining a strong possibility given her progressive behavioral, emotional, and executive function decline.

- Given that ARD and WKS can accelerate cognitive decline, her ability to execute a valid will or legal transactions in 2021 was highly questionable at best, and outright impossible at worst.
