Evidence of June Bloch's Severe Isolation, Cognitive Decline, and Complete Dependence on Lindsey Bloch

Overview:

This exhibit presents critical evidence of June Bloch's extreme isolation, cognitive deterioration, and her daughter Lindsey Bloch's deliberate emotional manipulation and control.

Despite living only 3.2 miles (an 8-minute drive) from Jaden Riley, June was so physically and psychologically restricted by December 2018 that even believing Jaden might be dead was not enough motivation for her to leave her home and check in person.

This level of dependence, fear, and withdrawal was a direct result of June's cognitive decline, social isolation, and Lindsey's growing control over her mother's perception of reality.

Key Evidence in This Exhibit:

1. A map detailing the short distance between June's home and Jaden's home.
 - It shows that June could have easily reached Jaden's house in under 10 minutes without ever needing to drive on a highway—only traveling through safe, familiar, residential streets.
 - Despite this, June still believed she would be "risking her life" to drive such a short distance.
2. Text messages from December 7-8, 2018, demonstrating June's total emotional collapse due to Lindsey's deception.
 - June went from desperate concern to complete rage, falsely accusing Jaden of hating her, abusing drugs, or abandoning her.
 - She threatened to call EMS and police to perform a wellness check, even though Jaden had already spoken with Lindsey and explained her situation.
3. Jaden's communications with Lindsey (Exhibit F) prove that Lindsey was fully aware of Jaden's whereabouts but refused to inform June.
 - Lindsey's refusal to ease her mother's fears allowed June's paranoia, delusions, and emotional instability to spiral out of control.
 - Lindsey deliberately withheld the truth so that June would believe Jaden was ignoring or abandoning her.

June's Extreme Isolation and Dependency on Lindsey

June Was Emotionally and Physically Dependent on Lindsey

By December 2018, June rarely left her home unless she was with Lindsey or Jonathan. Her world had shrunk to an alarming degree, consisting of:

- Her house
- Her job as a high school librarian
- Her daughter Lindsey and son-in-law Jonathan (who lived next door)
- Her cat
- Occasional outings, which were always facilitated by Lindsey or Jonathan

She had become fully dependent on Lindsey and Jonathan for transportation, major decision-making, and daily life tasks.

June Believed Driving Even 3.2 Miles Was "Risking Her Life"

- In the December 2018 texts, June stated she was not willing to risk her life to drive to Jaden's home to check if she was alive.
- The map shows that this was only a short, easy drive through quiet residential neighborhoods.
- This statement reflects either severe physical limitations, cognitive impairment, or an extreme level of fear-based restriction imposed on June by Lindsey.

This degree of withdrawal and dependence demonstrates June's mental and physical decline, further supporting that she was unfit to execute major legal and financial decisions in 2021.

Lindsey's Deliberate Withholding of Critical Information to Escalate June's Panic

Key Facts:

On December 7, 2018, while June was spiraling into an emotional breakdown, Lindsey reached out to Jaden via text and phone.

Jaden fully explained her situation to Lindsey, making it clear that:

- She was attending a work conference in Chicago, IL and was dealing with extreme work-related stress.
- She was experiencing significant cell phone reception issues with both her work and personal phones, making it difficult to maintain consistent communication.
- Due to an emergency IT systems failure at work, she was the only employee capable of resolving the issue, as her specialized knowledge of Microsoft cloud security infrastructure was critical to preventing company losses and a potential lost client.
- The work crisis completely consumed her day, forcing her to miss most of the conference events.
- On December 8, she would be flying back to Austin and would have limited availability due to travel logistics.

- On December 9, she would immediately leave for a pre-planned Caribbean cruise, requiring an overnight drive to the Gulf of Mexico port city for departure.

Jaden clearly articulated her whereabouts, challenges, and upcoming schedule to Lindsey, ensuring that Lindsey had all the necessary information to pass along to June and ease any of June's concerns.

However, Lindsey never passed this information on to June. Instead, she allowed her mother to spiral into paranoia and fear, reinforcing June's belief that Jaden was ignoring her, abandoning her, or potentially in danger.

The Result:

- June descended into a full-scale emotional collapse, sending increasingly erratic and desperate messages.
- She became convinced that Jaden was either dead, on drugs, or deliberately tormenting her.
- She threatened to call EMS, the fire department, and the police to force a wellness check.
- June escalated from pleading and crying to extreme hostility, hurling insults and accusations at Jaden.

Legal & Psychological Implications:

- Lindsey's deliberate withholding of key information demonstrates clear emotional abuse and manipulation.
- Lindsey's actions align with patterns of elder exploitation and undue influence, reinforcing that she controlled June's perception of reality.
- By December 2018, June's emotional and cognitive instability were fully evident, reinforcing the claim that she lacked testamentary capacity in 2021.

Conclusion

- June's isolation, cognitive decline, and dependency on Lindsey were already severe by 2018.
- Lindsey took advantage of her mother's vulnerabilities, withholding key information to manipulate June's emotions and perception of Jaden.
- This level of emotional instability proves that June was not in a mental state to make legal decisions just three years later in 2021.

This exhibit corroborates the pattern of undue influence, isolation, and cognitive decline, all of which form the foundation for contesting the validity of the fraudulent 2021 will and property transfer.
